PARENTAL ADVISORY

Oklahoma.

I'm glad to hear your voice...M. I wondered. Whether... they had caught up to you.

Not yet.

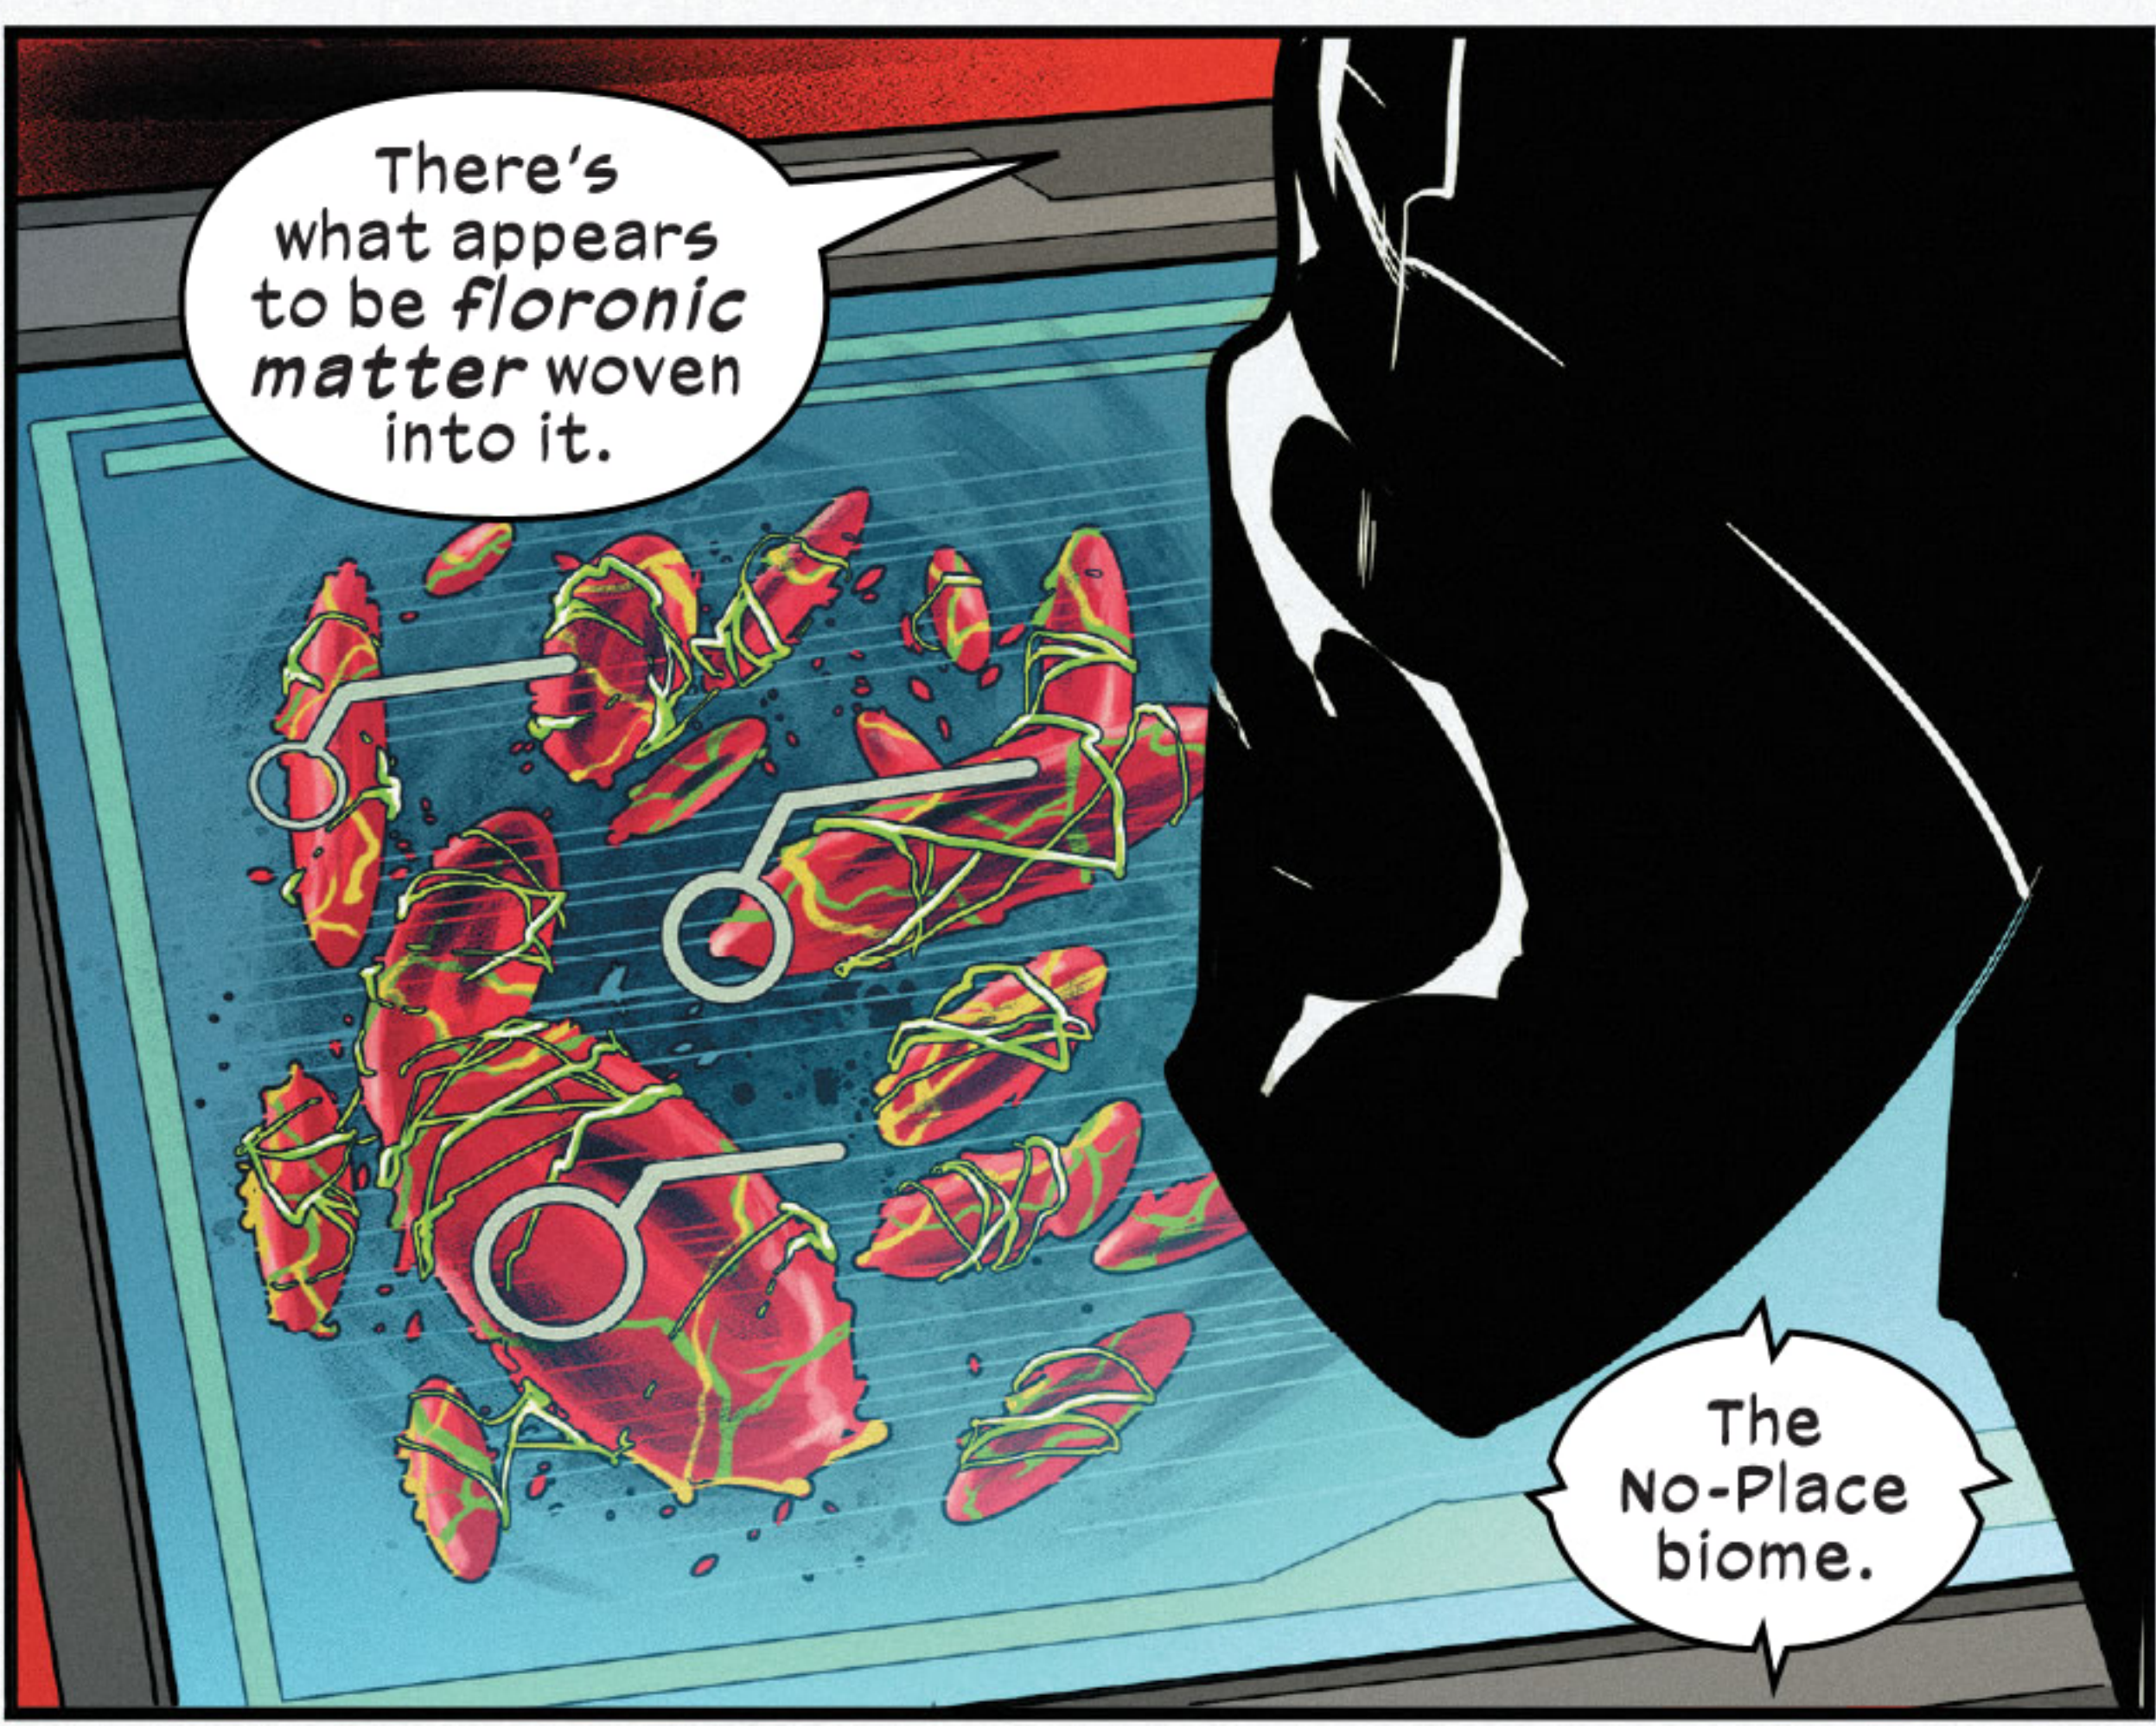

I wanted to apologize. For dragging you into this. I hope...everything's okay at the hospital.

Don't worry about that. Listen--I've done some follow-up tests on the samples I pulled off you.

And the cancer--it's not like anything I've ever seen.

There's what appears to be floronic matter woven into it.

The No-Place biome.

What?

They did this to me.

I need to go now, Jane. Thank you again.

What are you going to do?

DEAD RUN

To protect its future, Moira MacTaggart secretly forbade mutants with precognitive abilities from the mutant society of Krakoa. When Mystique discovered Moira was responsible for keeping her away from her love, the precog Destiny, she cut off Moira’s left arm and used a specially designed weapon to strip her of her mutant ability to resurrect.

Now on the run, Moira has disguised herself and discovered that she has stage four cancer. With only one life to lose, and persona non grata with the mutants, Moira is desperately seeking alternative options, while dodging the multiple forces hunting her...

:::Anomalous Wolverine detected on Krakoa::: Emotional signatures --> pain, hate

 :::Brief telepathic communication yielded hostile response:::
 Messaging --> “blood” “death” “kill” “murder”

Query: Is there an intruder or duplicate or a brain glitch?

Re: brain glitch: <Jean acknowledges the severe physical and emotional toll of their current mission may have caused her to hallucinate this “additional” Wolverine. >

Gulf of Mexico.

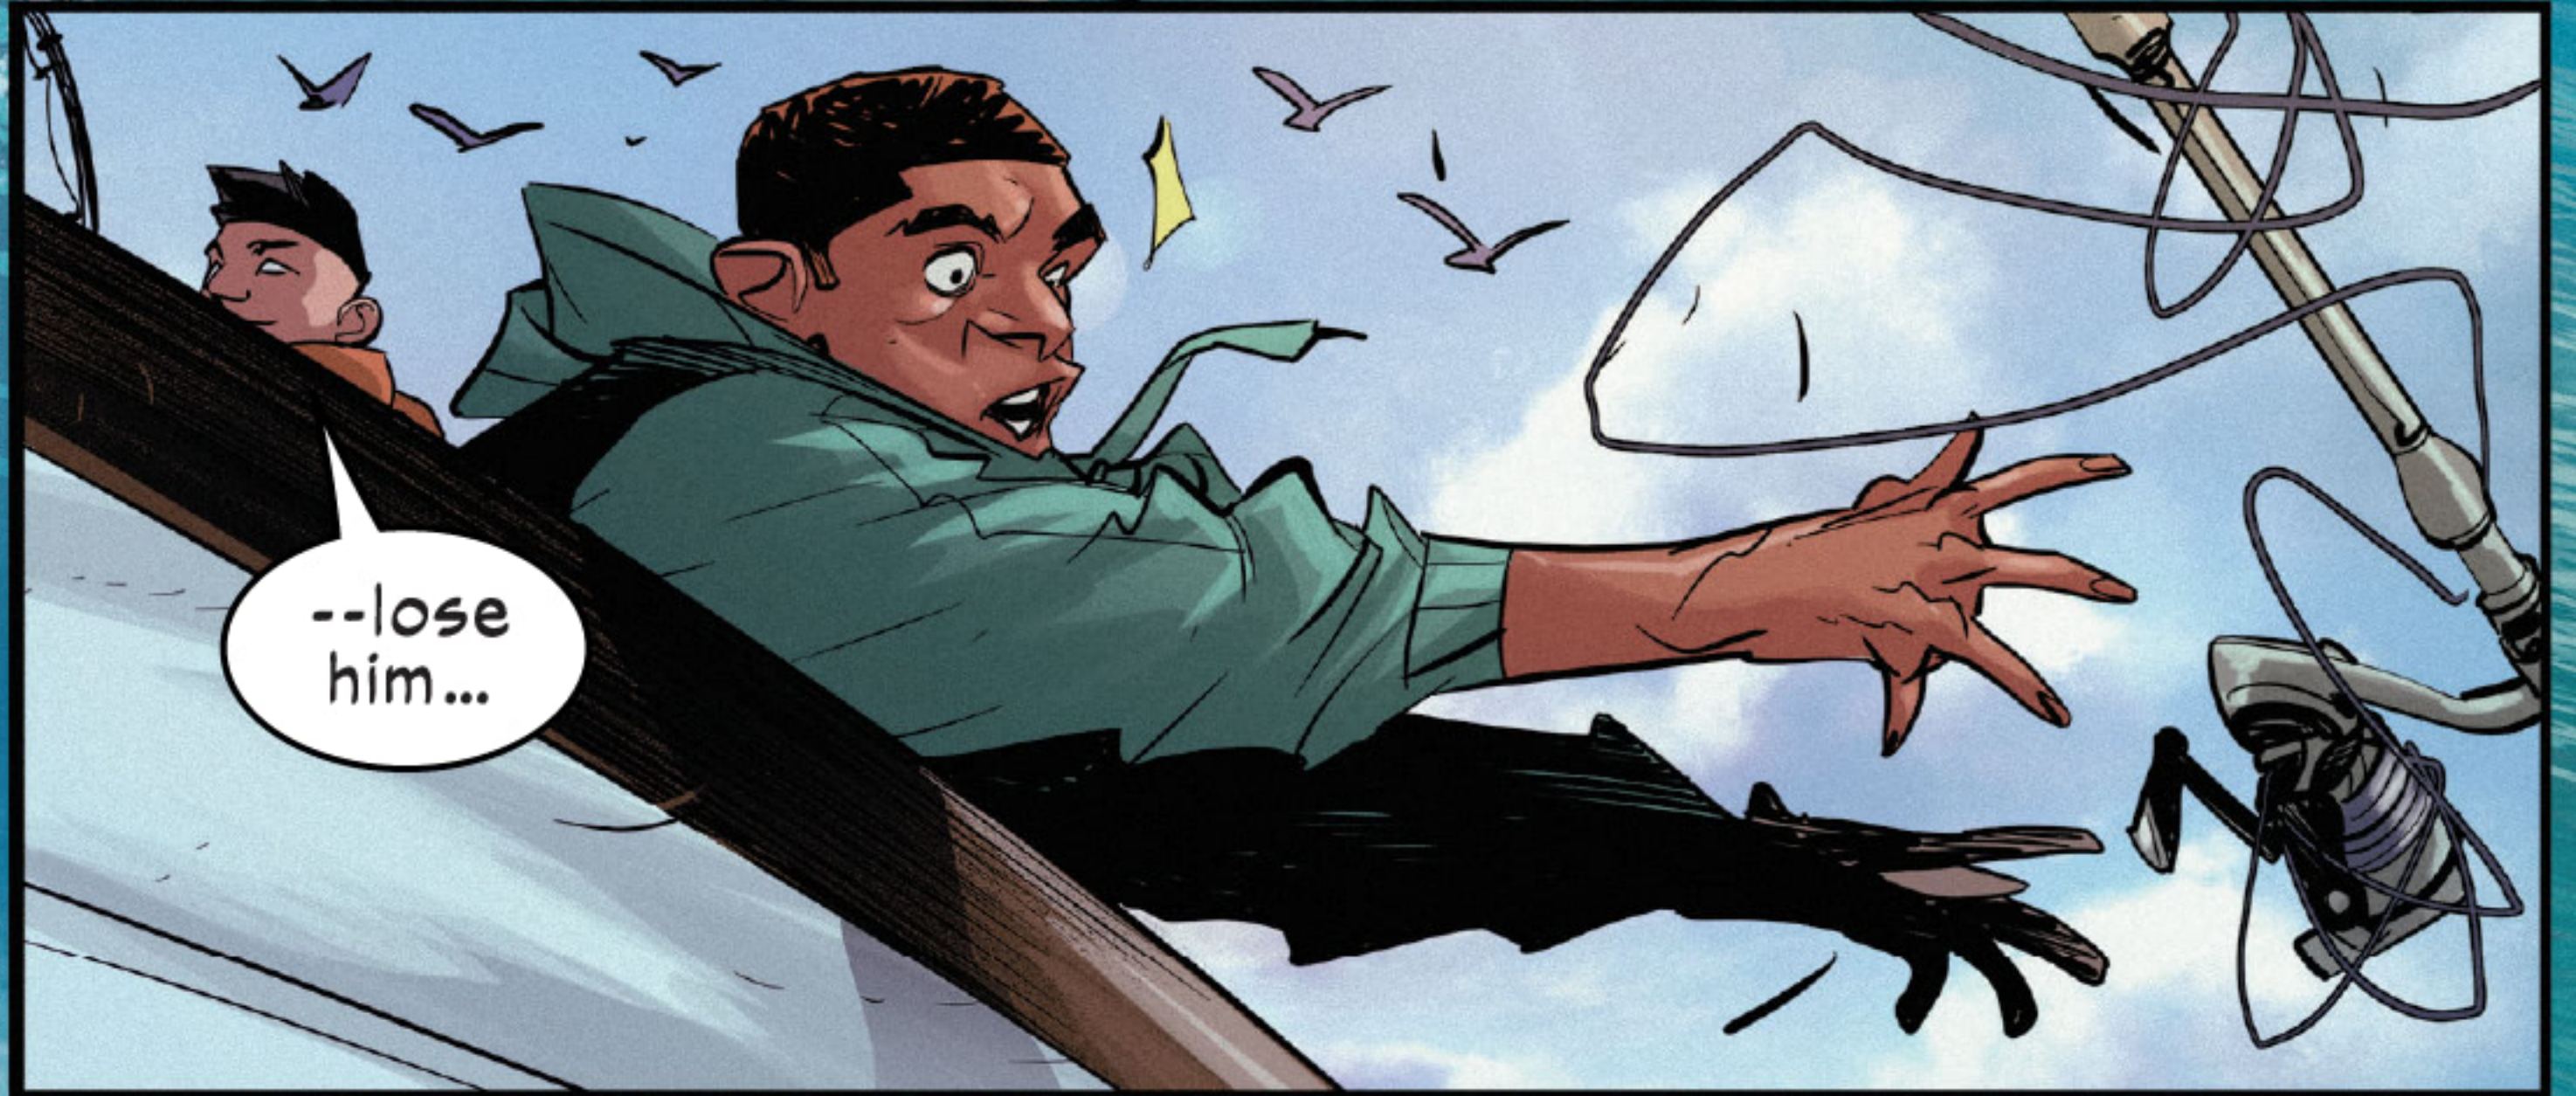

I think we got something, Randy.

WHZZZZZZ

Something big.

Get in the chair, get in the chair! Lock in before you--

--lose him...

Oh, f. Are you f@ kidding me?

Maybe he swung over and got tangled on your line.

Crank hard. Don't let up. Don't give him no slack, brother.

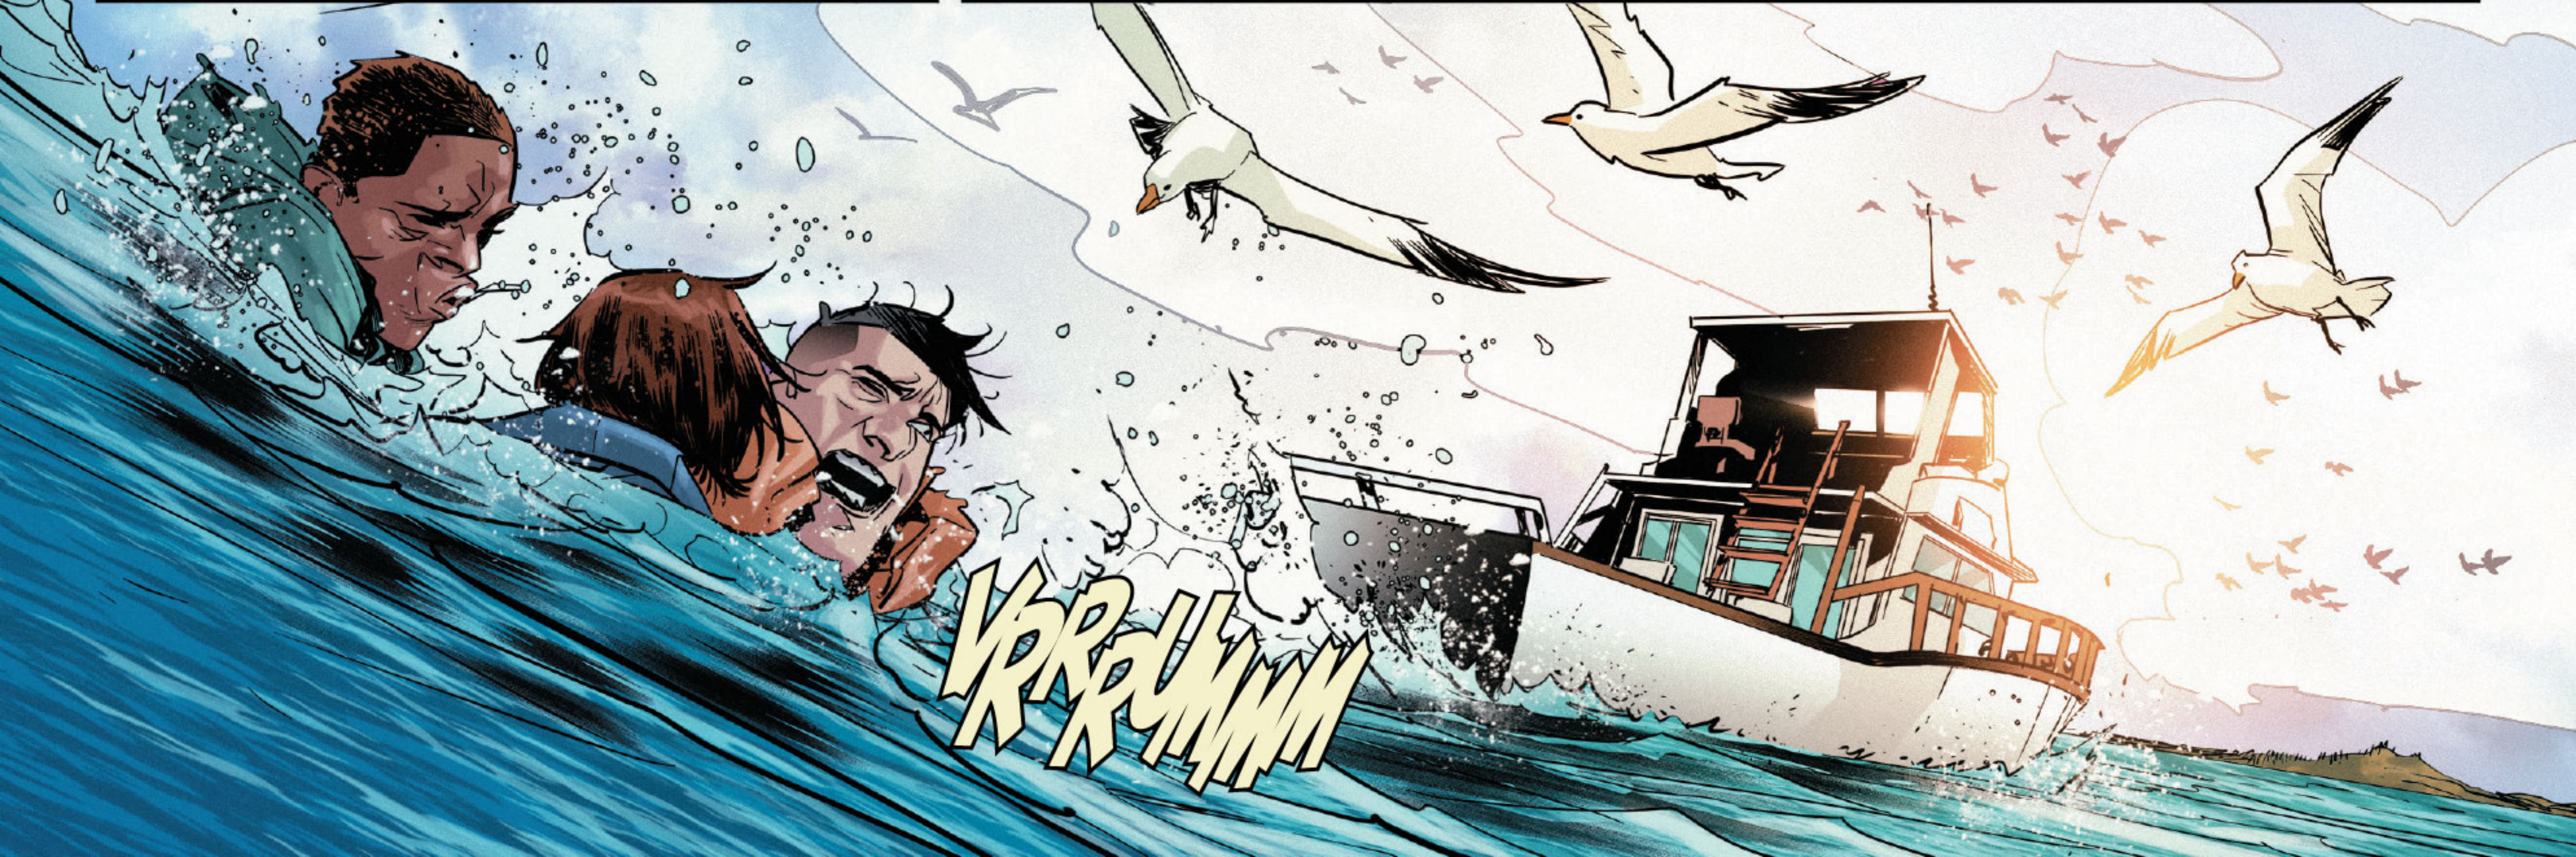

This thing is going to be...

...a monster.

New Mexico.

This wasn't supposed to be how things
turned out.

It was my dream
too.

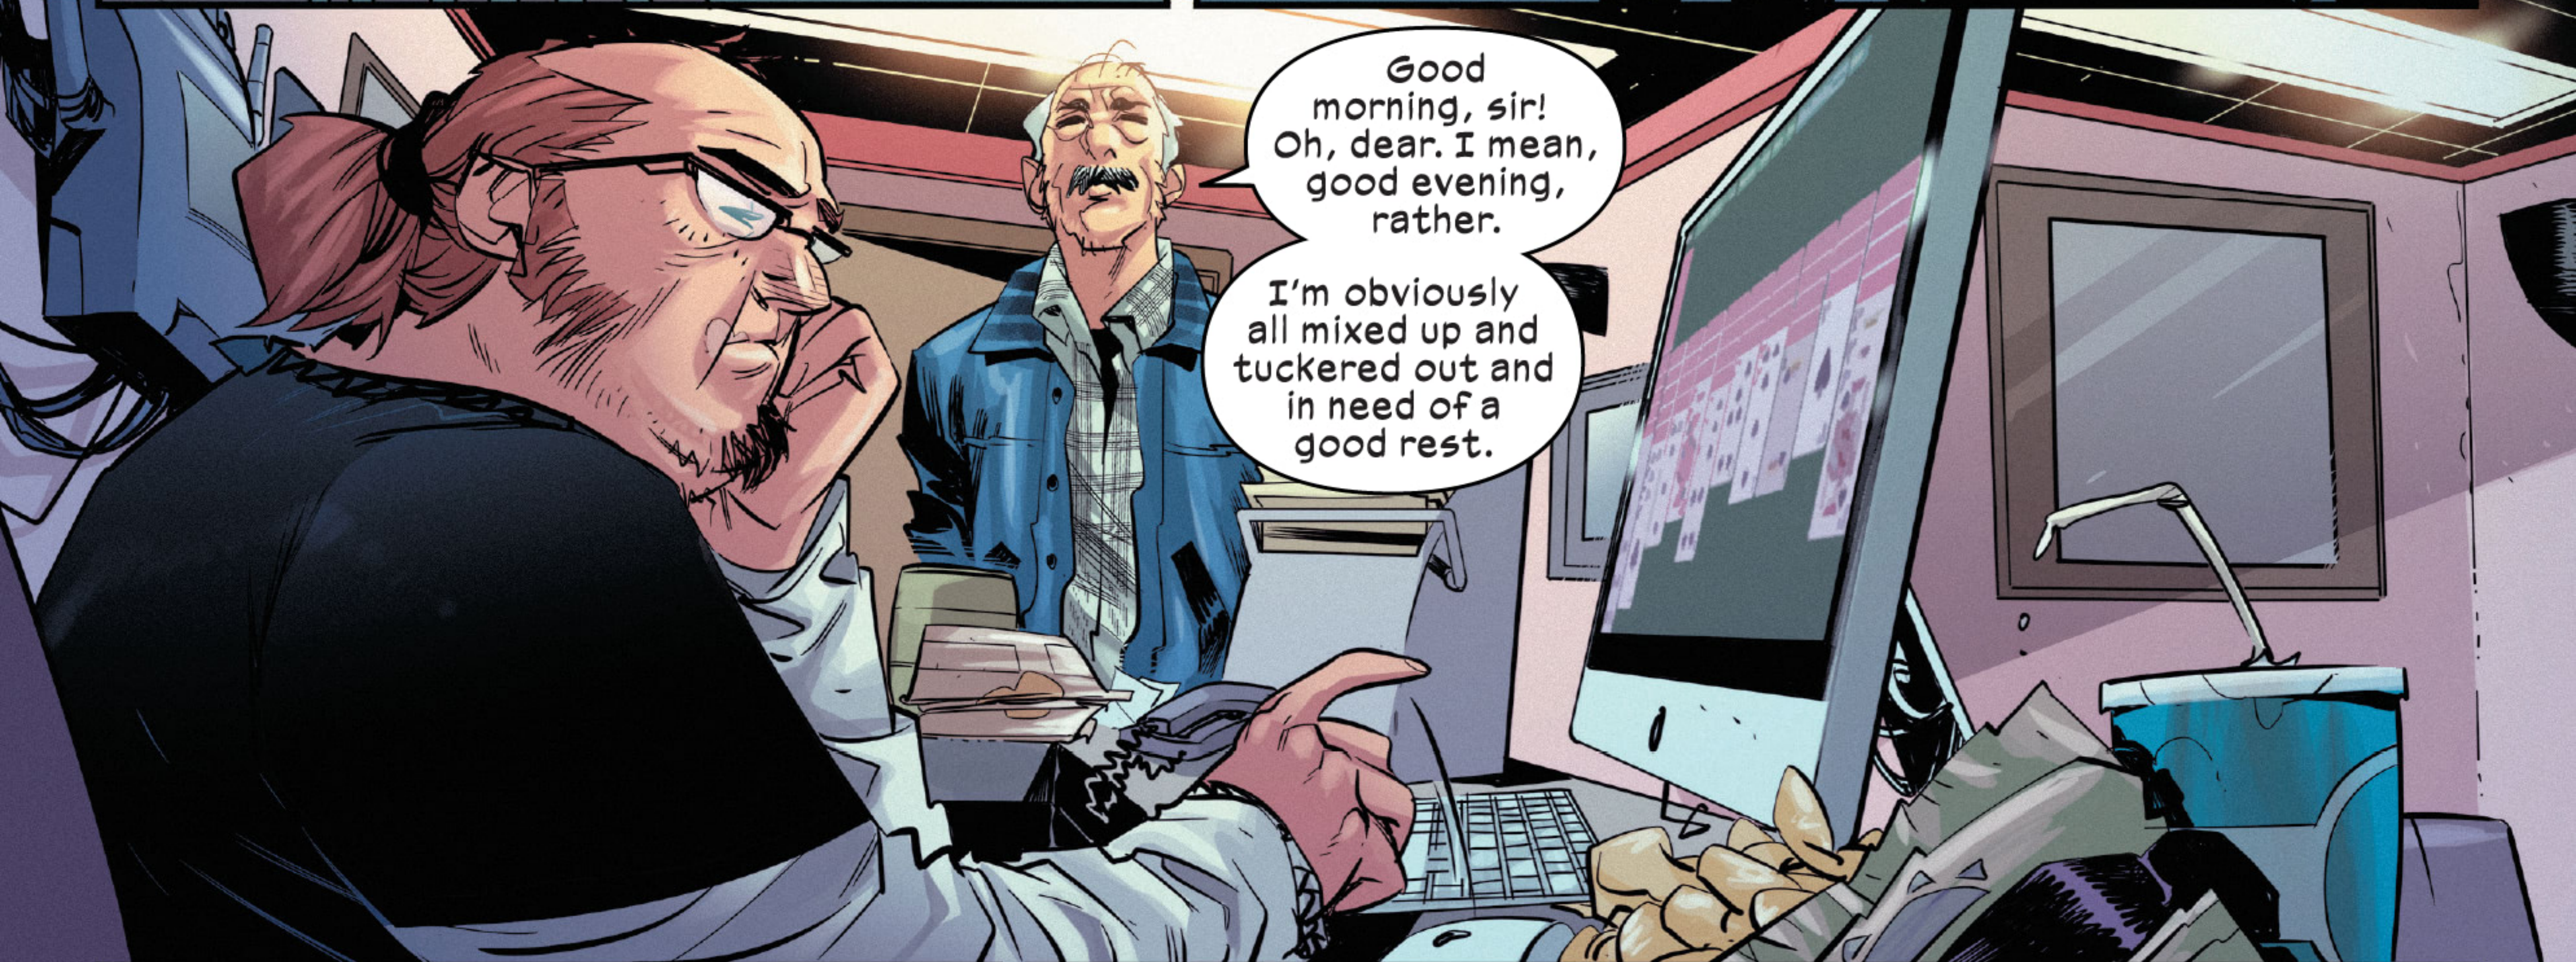

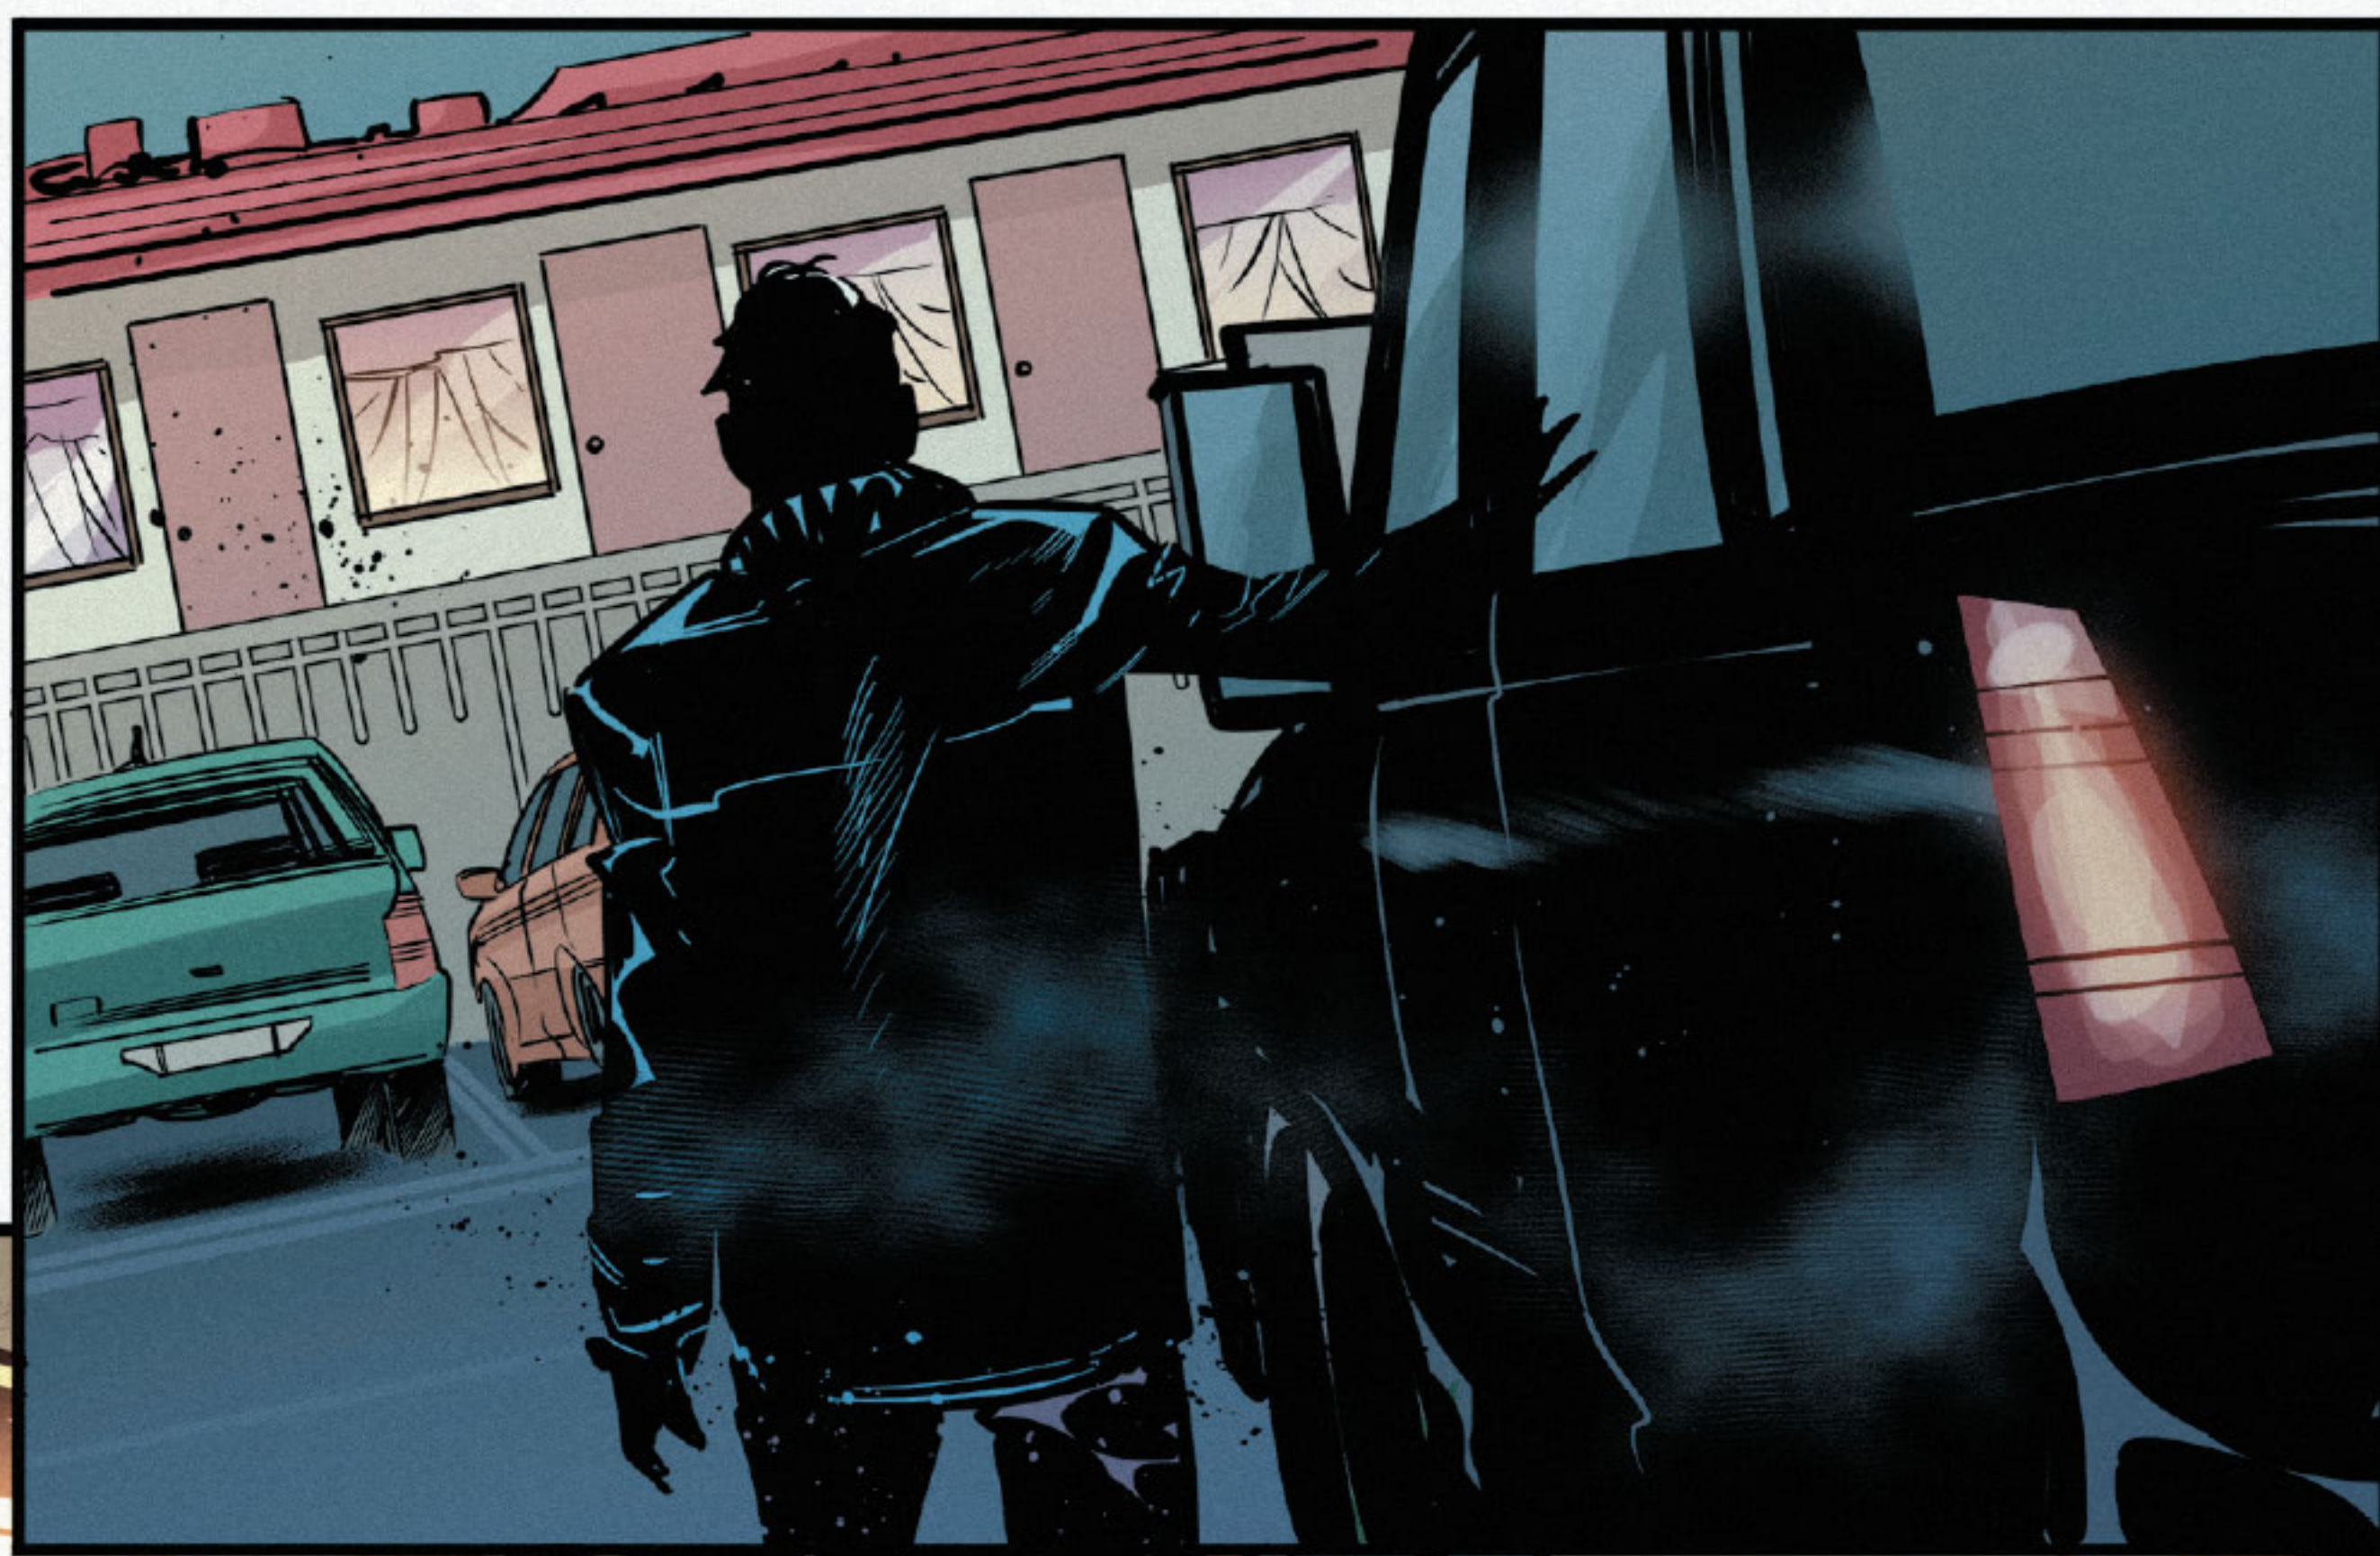

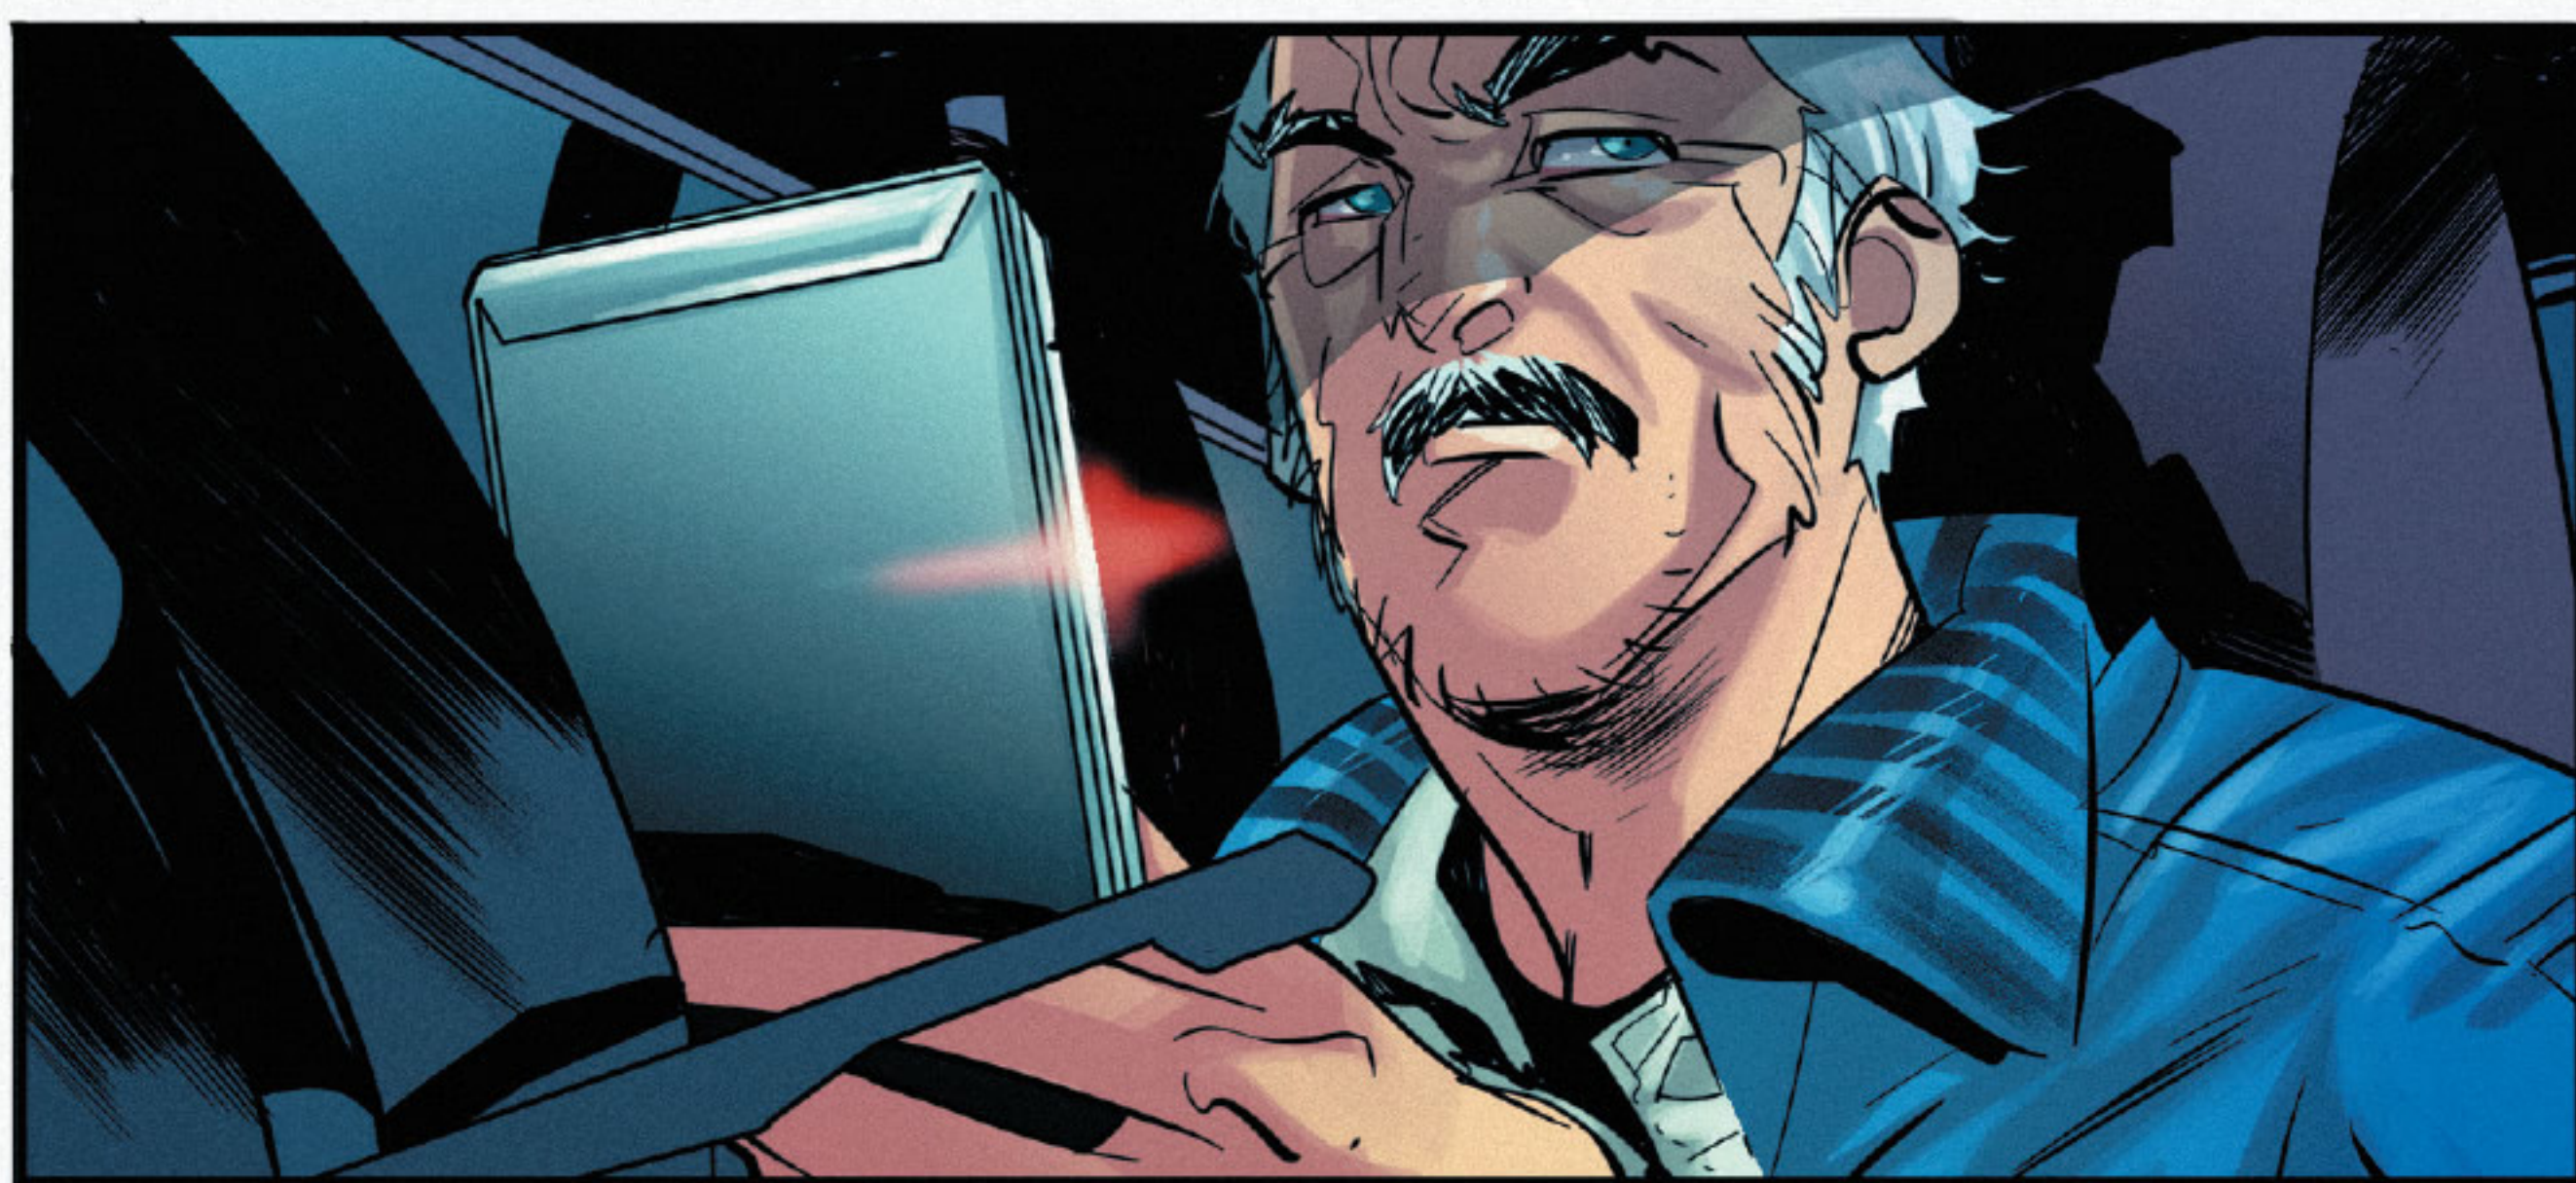

It was my dream
as much as his.

I've gone from being the secret weapon they protected...

...to the curse
they want to erase.

Mystique found me before. She's going to find me again.

And I've got a pretty good guess
as to how.

Good morning, sir!
Oh, dear. I mean, good evening, rather.

I'm obviously all mixed up and tuckered out and in need of a good rest.

A long day on the road will leave you with an empty tank, wouldn't you say? Now, I'm supposed to meet my daughter here. If you could tell me--

Fifty bucks a night. Cash only.

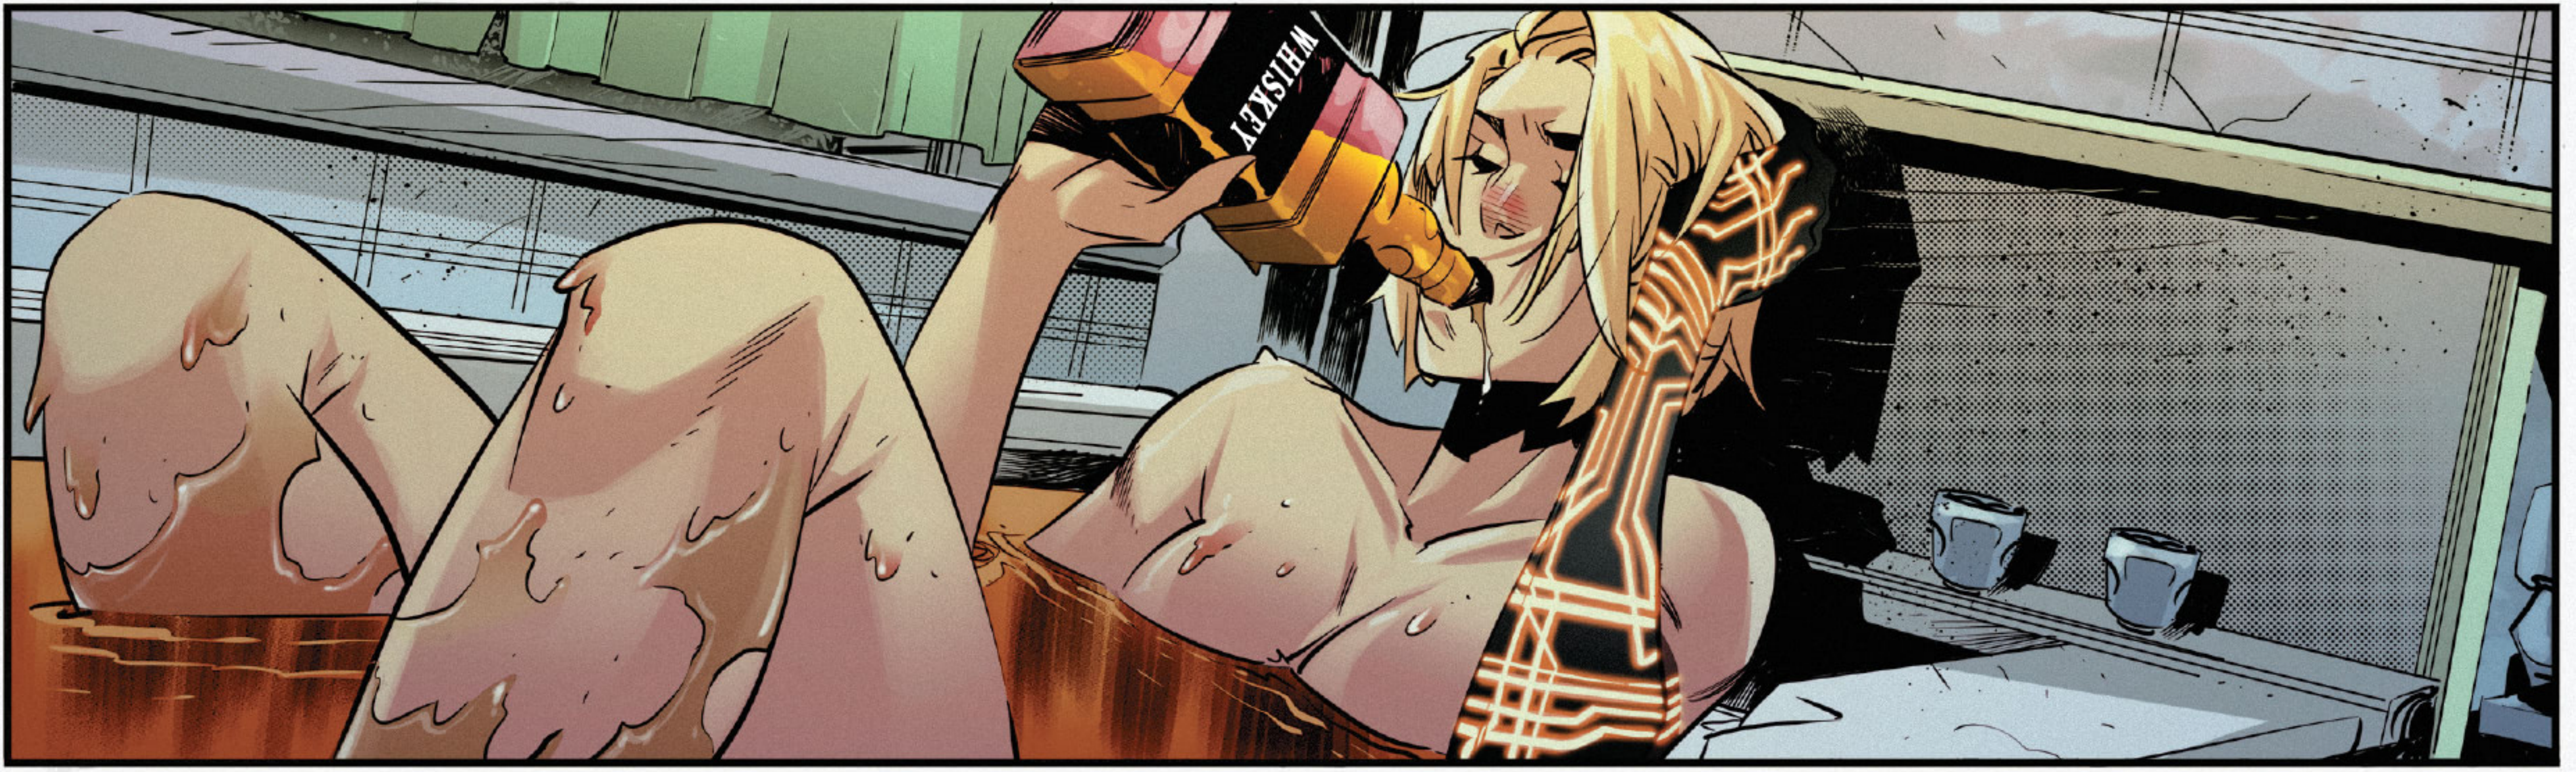

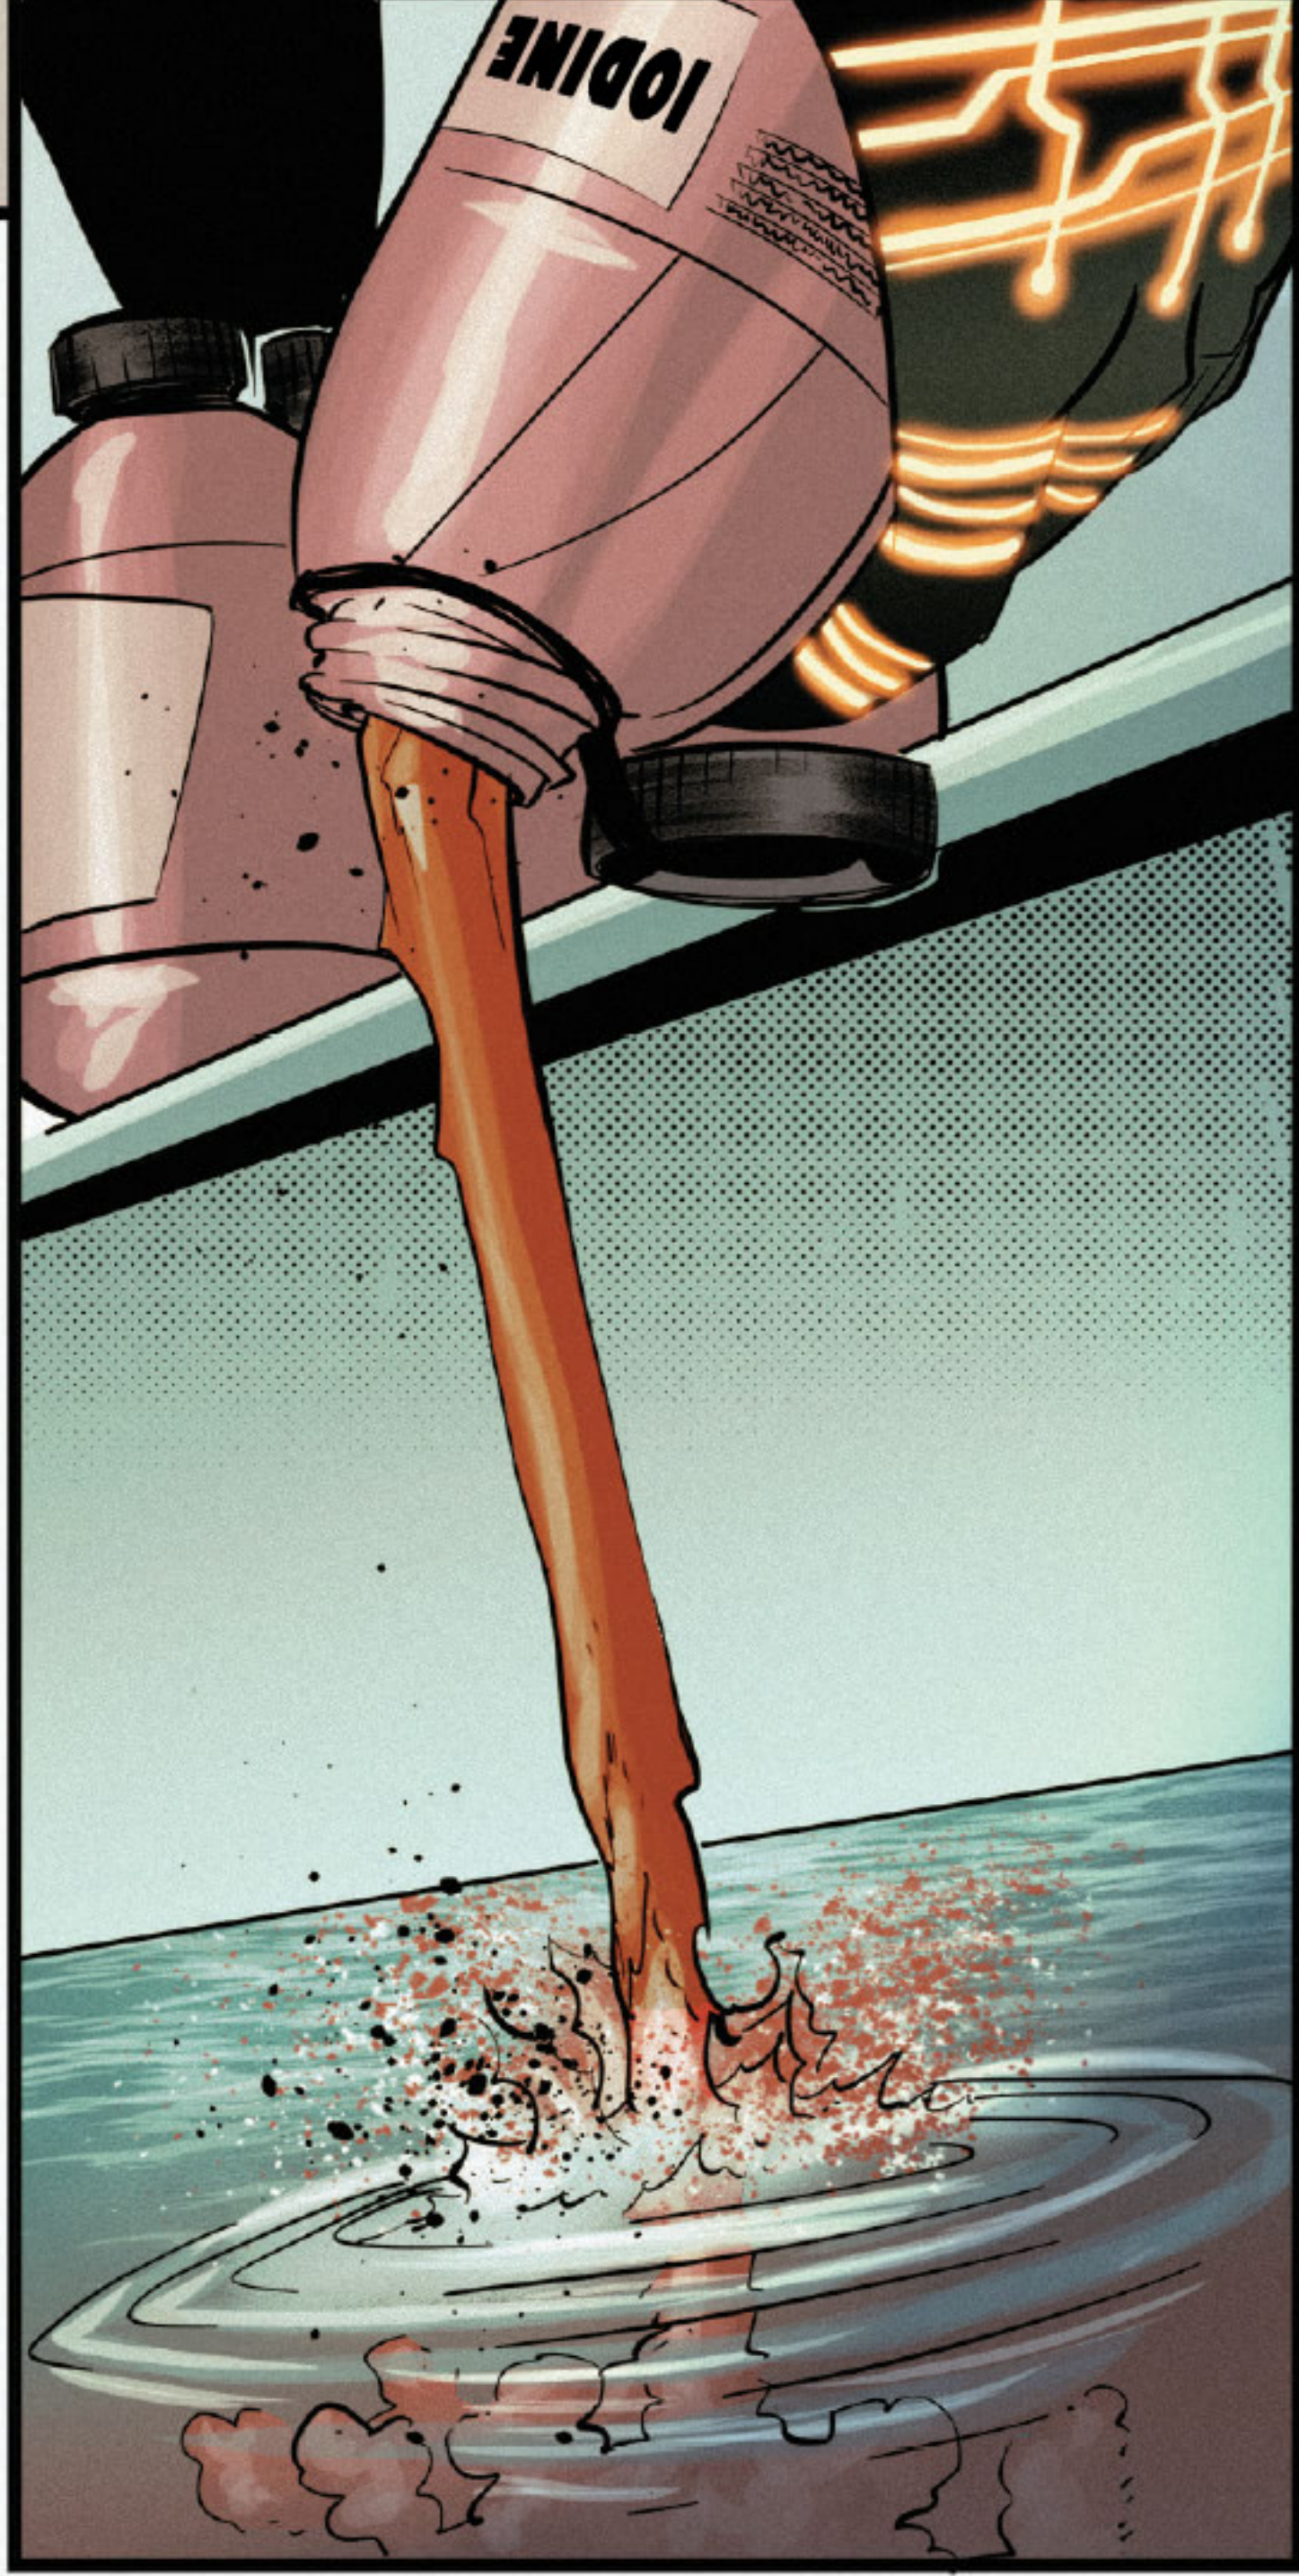

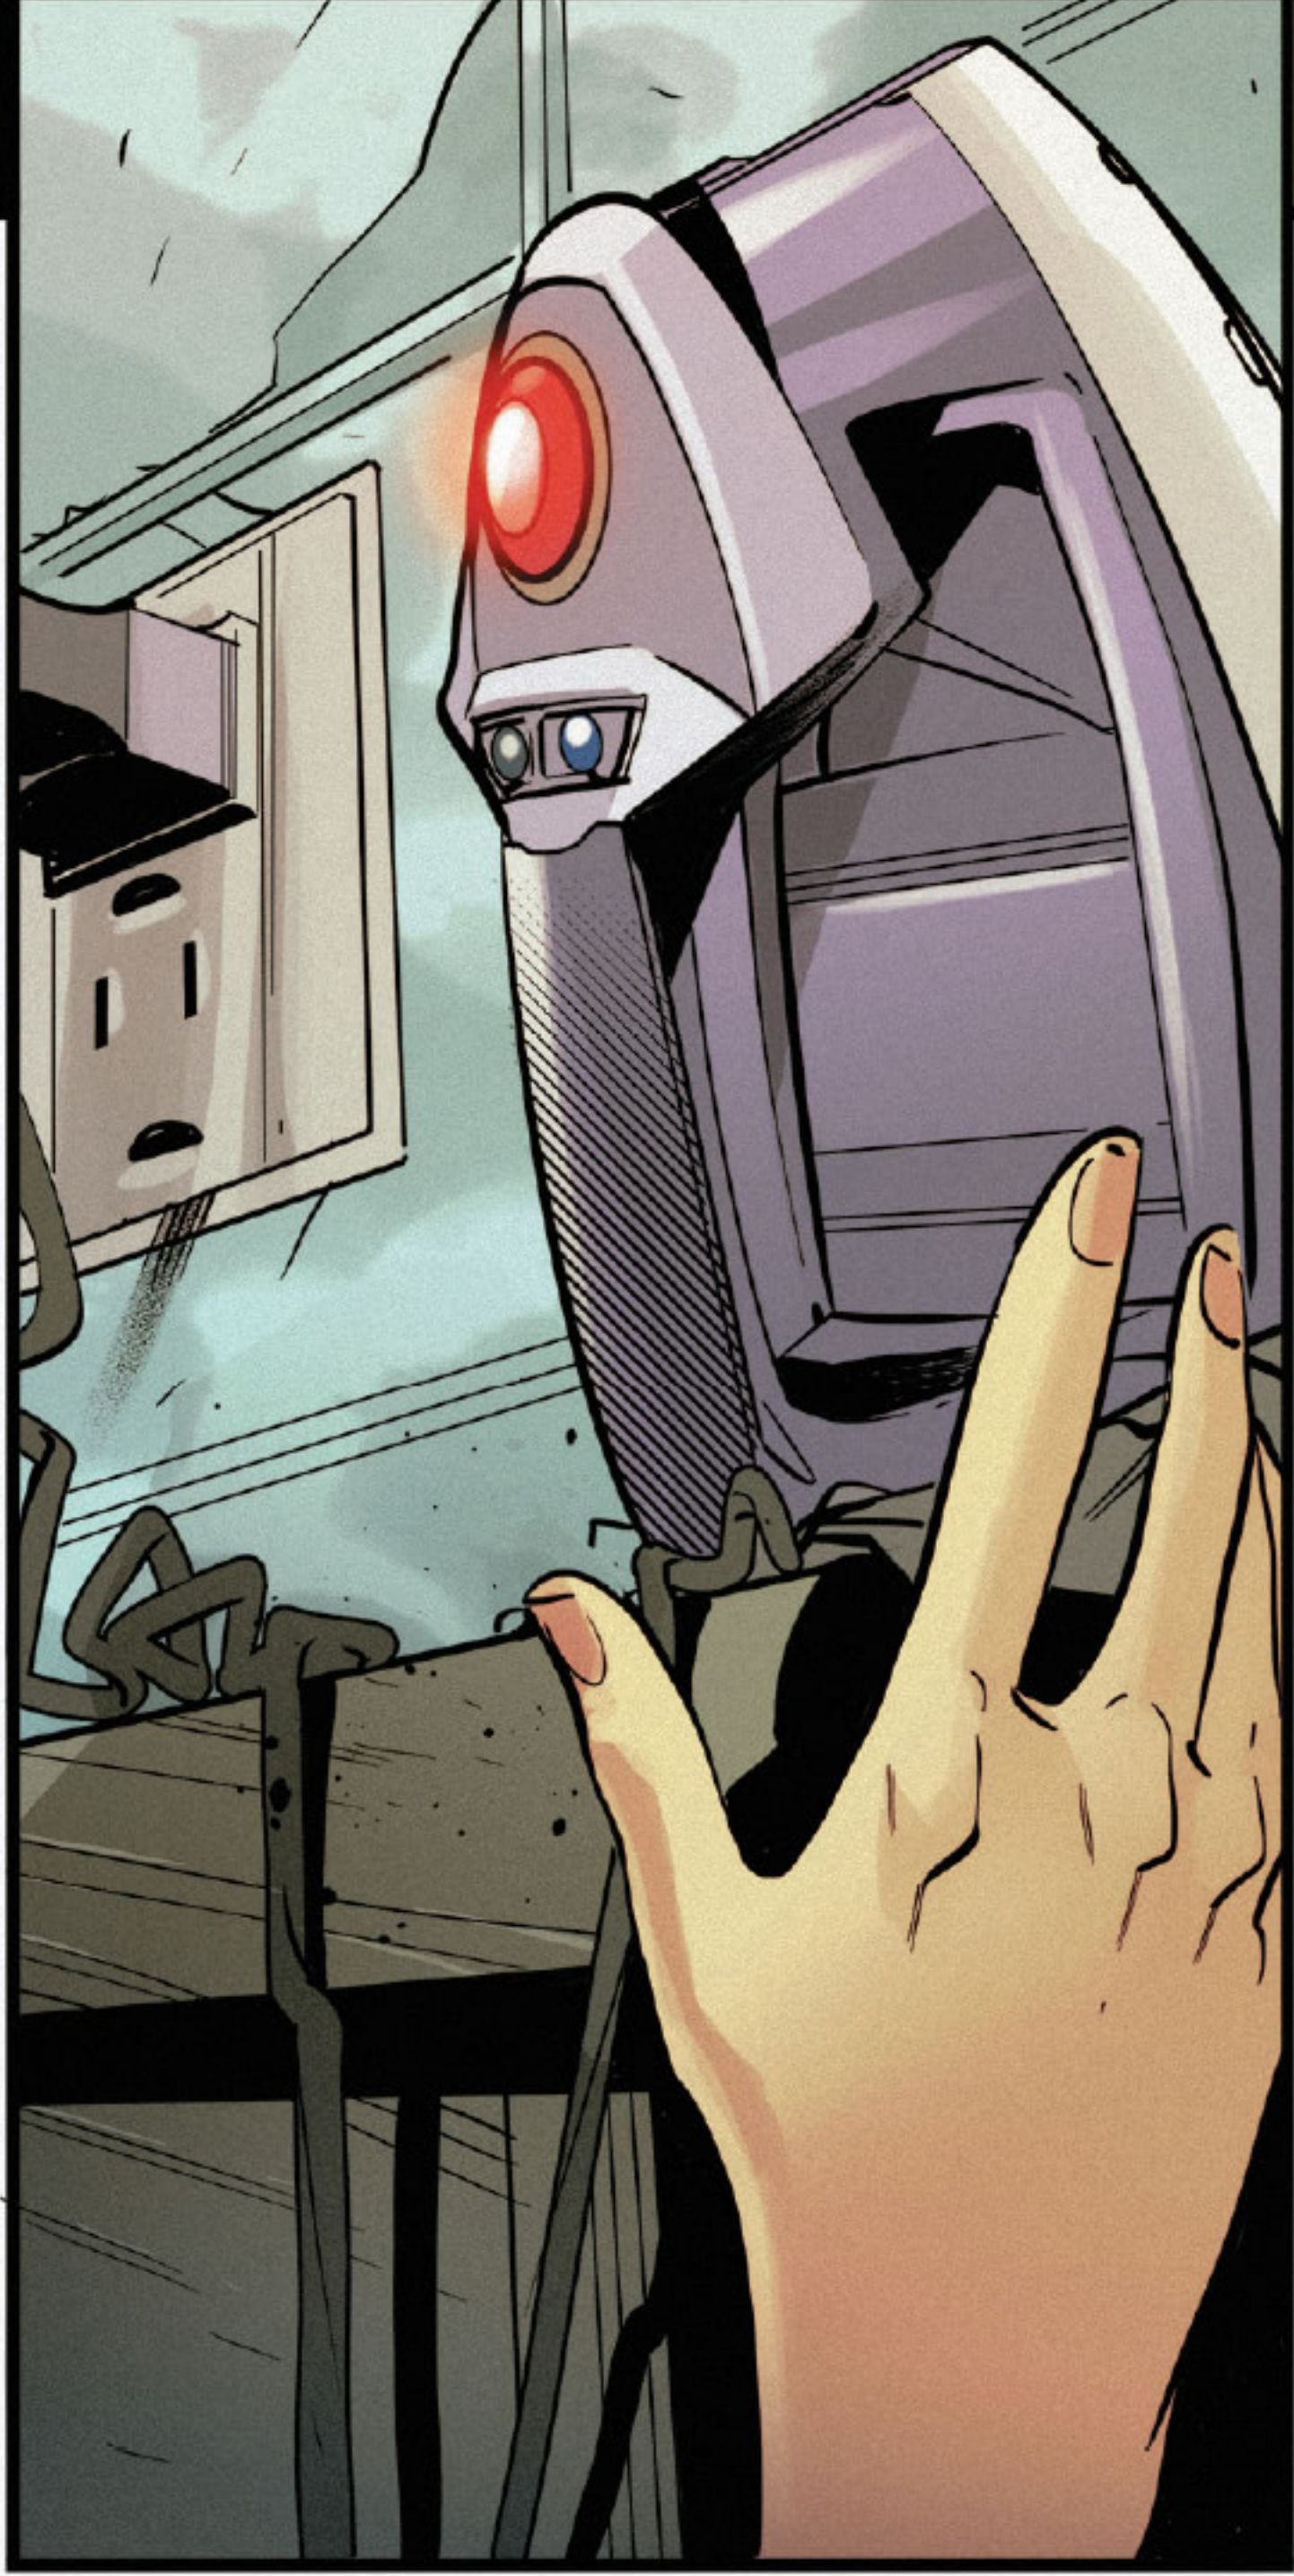

Here's twice that, and the extra is for you, my good man. Now as for my daughter, she's traveling alone and--

I'll take your money, old man. But I ain't telling you $##%@.

Oh? I think you will.

Everybody talks eventually. It's just a matter of how many bones they want broken.

Krakoa.
Biome of Mystique
and Destiny.

I warned
her that this would likely come
to pass.

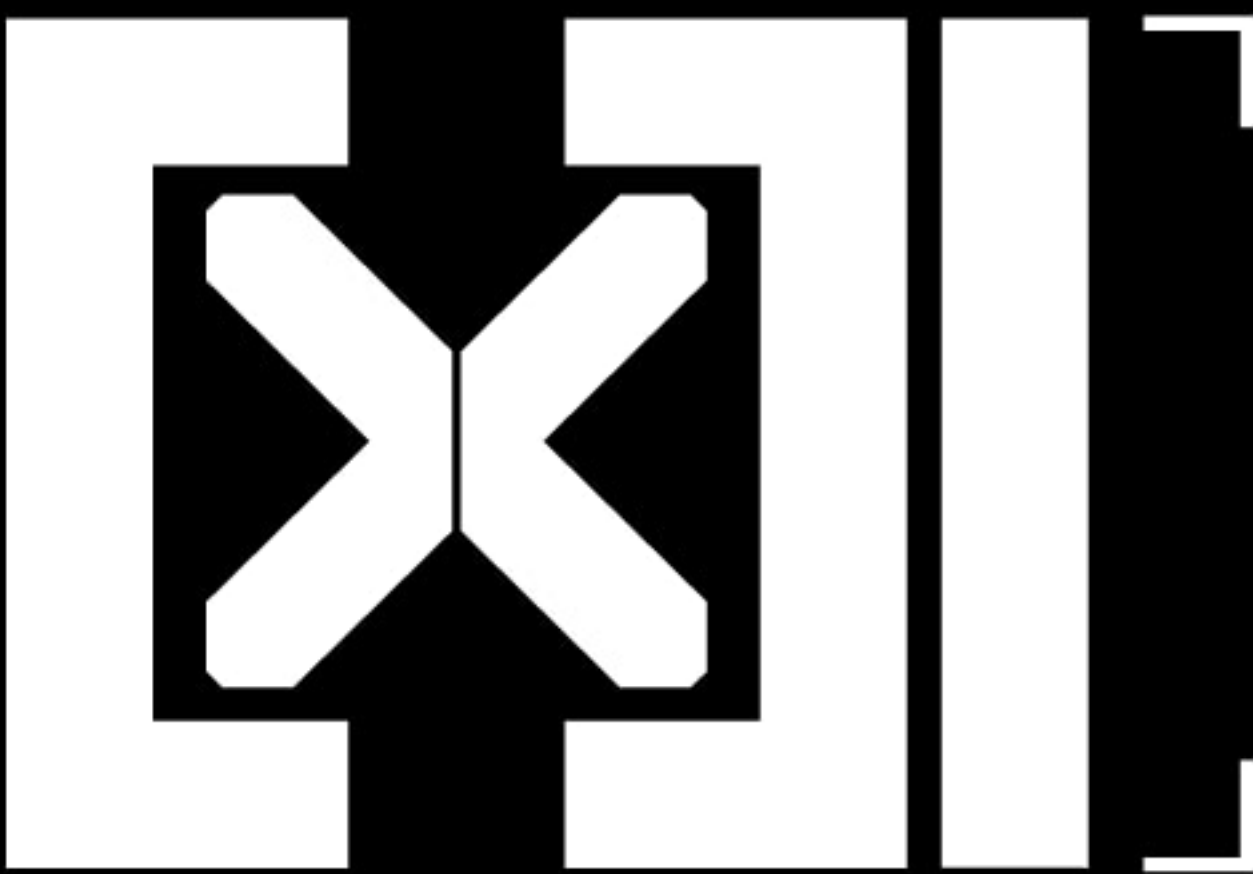

But Raven
was certain enough in herself
to see the future
as negotiable.

But I sense that all
may not be lost.
A figure keeps materializing in my mind.

A man in black...

I hate
being right,
my love.

Death
himself.

Forge's Lab.

What can you tell me about the pod Black Tom found, Forge? Any progress yet?

I'm still trying to crack the analytics.

But here's
the thing,
Professor.

In the same way you can examine stone
or ice--by coring it,
tracking the chemicals
and sediment that belong to different layers of time...

...you can do the same thing with mature plants. Like trees.

Yes.
Go on.

Well,
this thing...
it's Krakoan. But it's old as all hell.
The timelines just don't match
up.

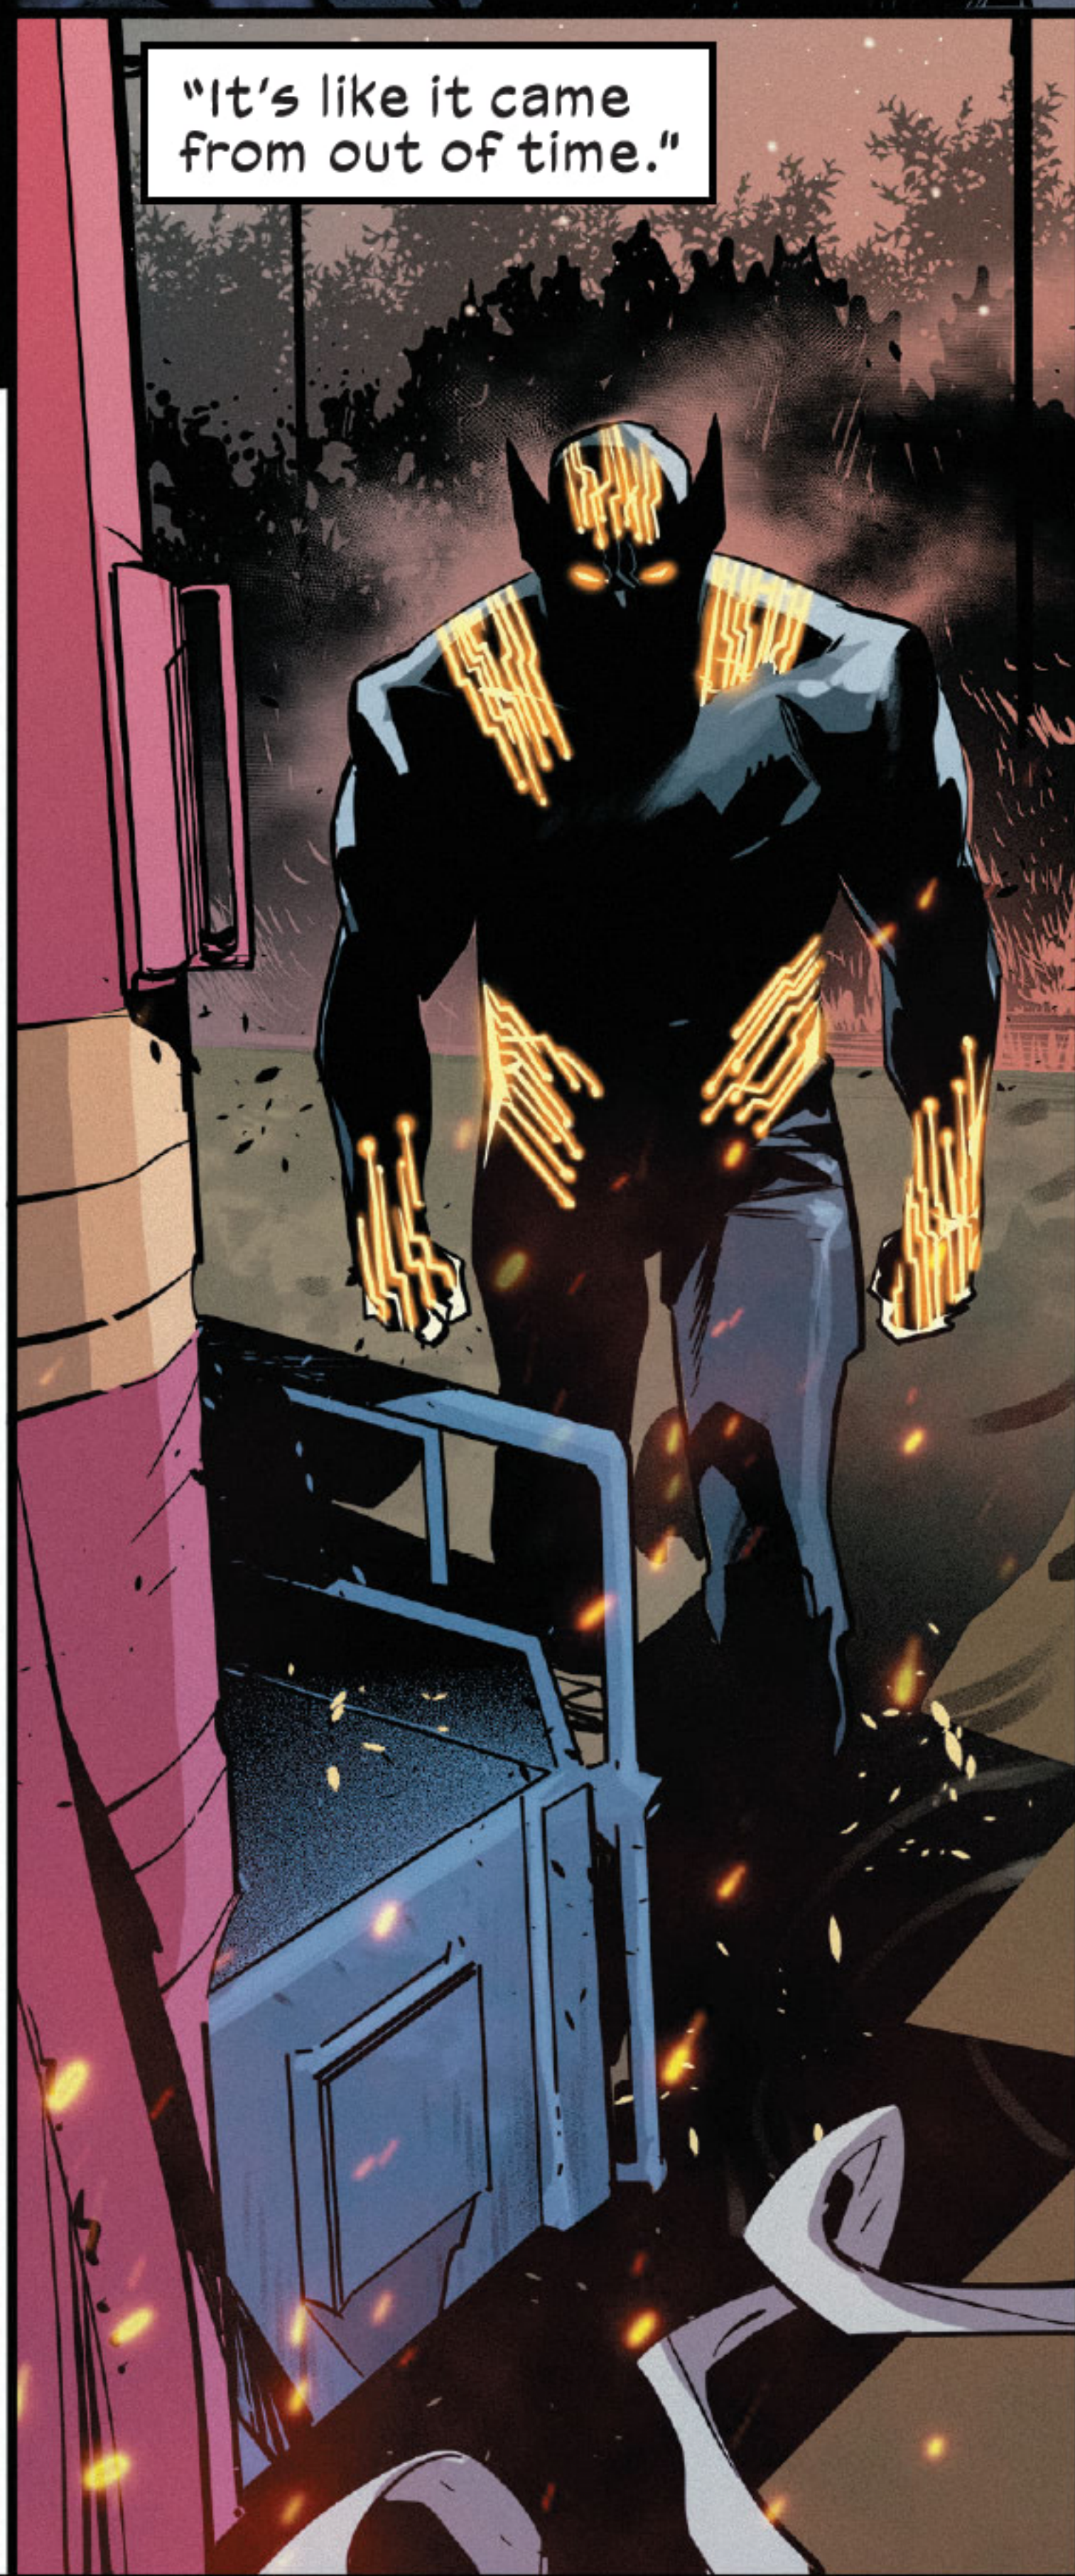

What
are you saying?

What I'm
trying to say is...
this thing appears
to be a thousand years older than the island
itself.

"It doesn't belong here."

"It's like it came from out of time."

IN-WE-(PHALANX)-AM

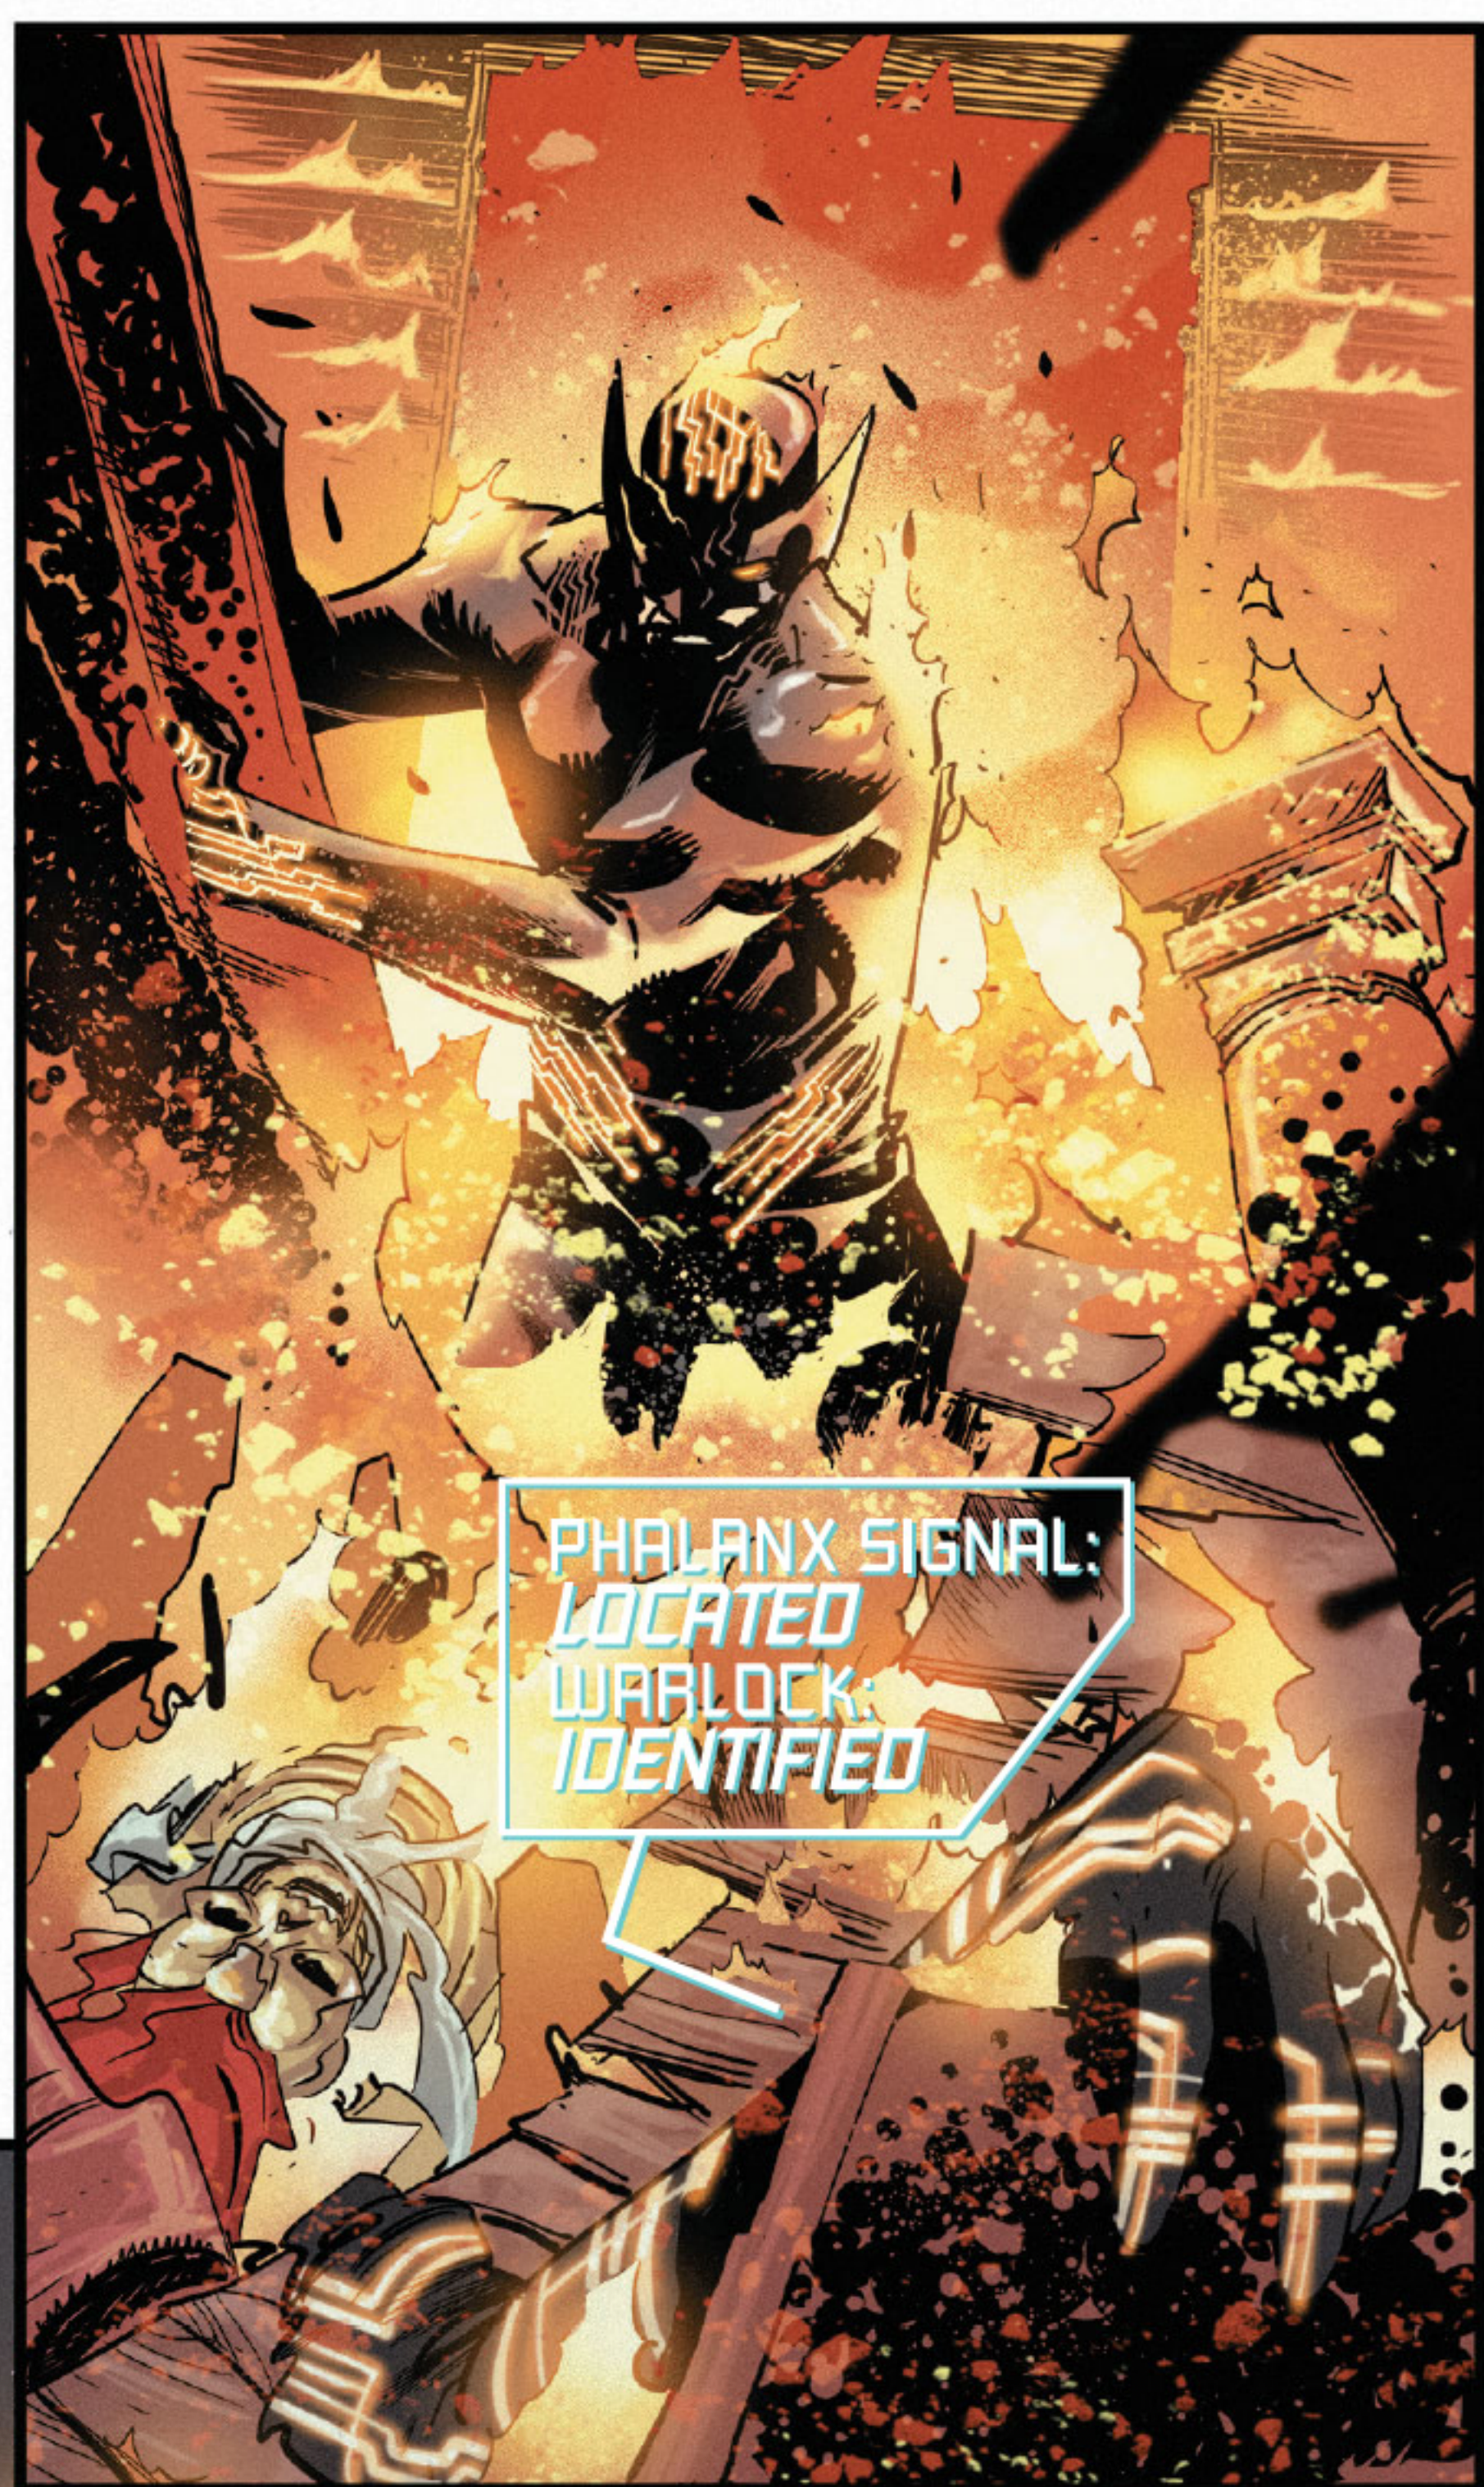

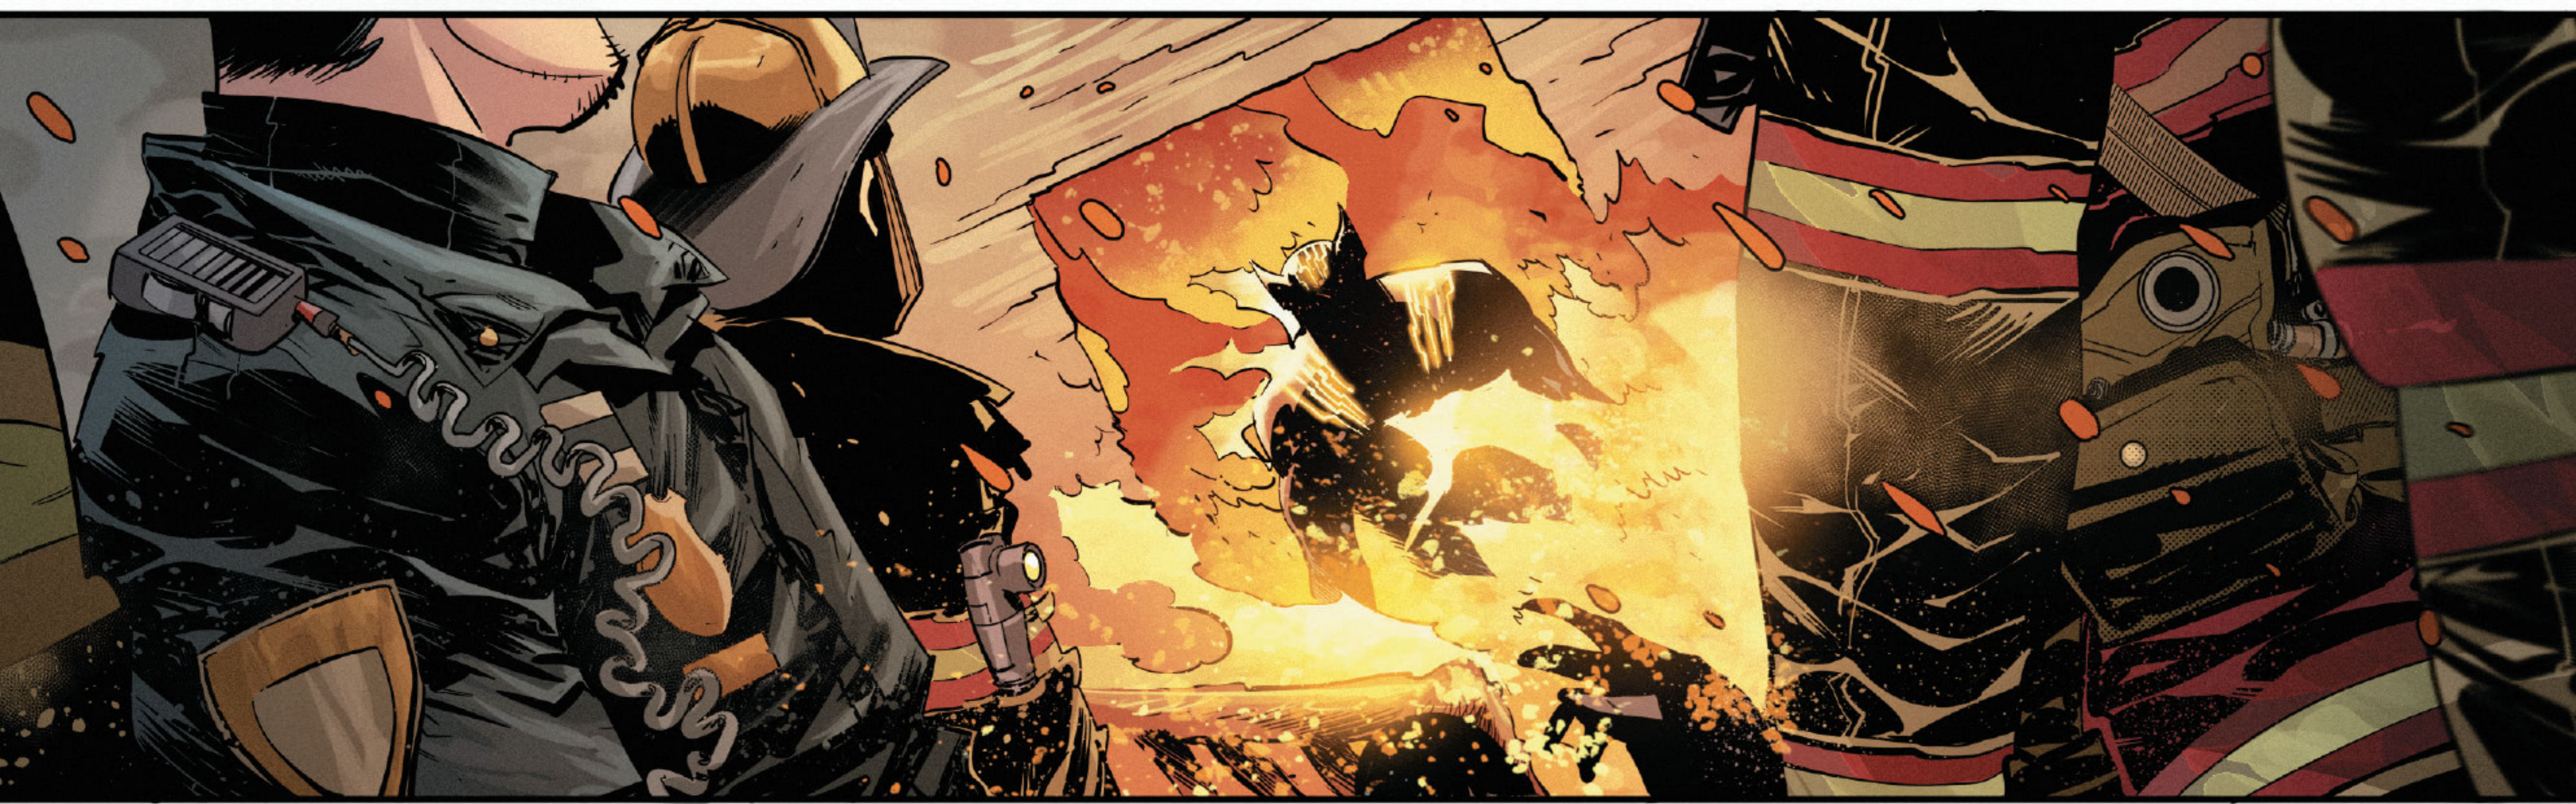

What the hell, man? Stay back.

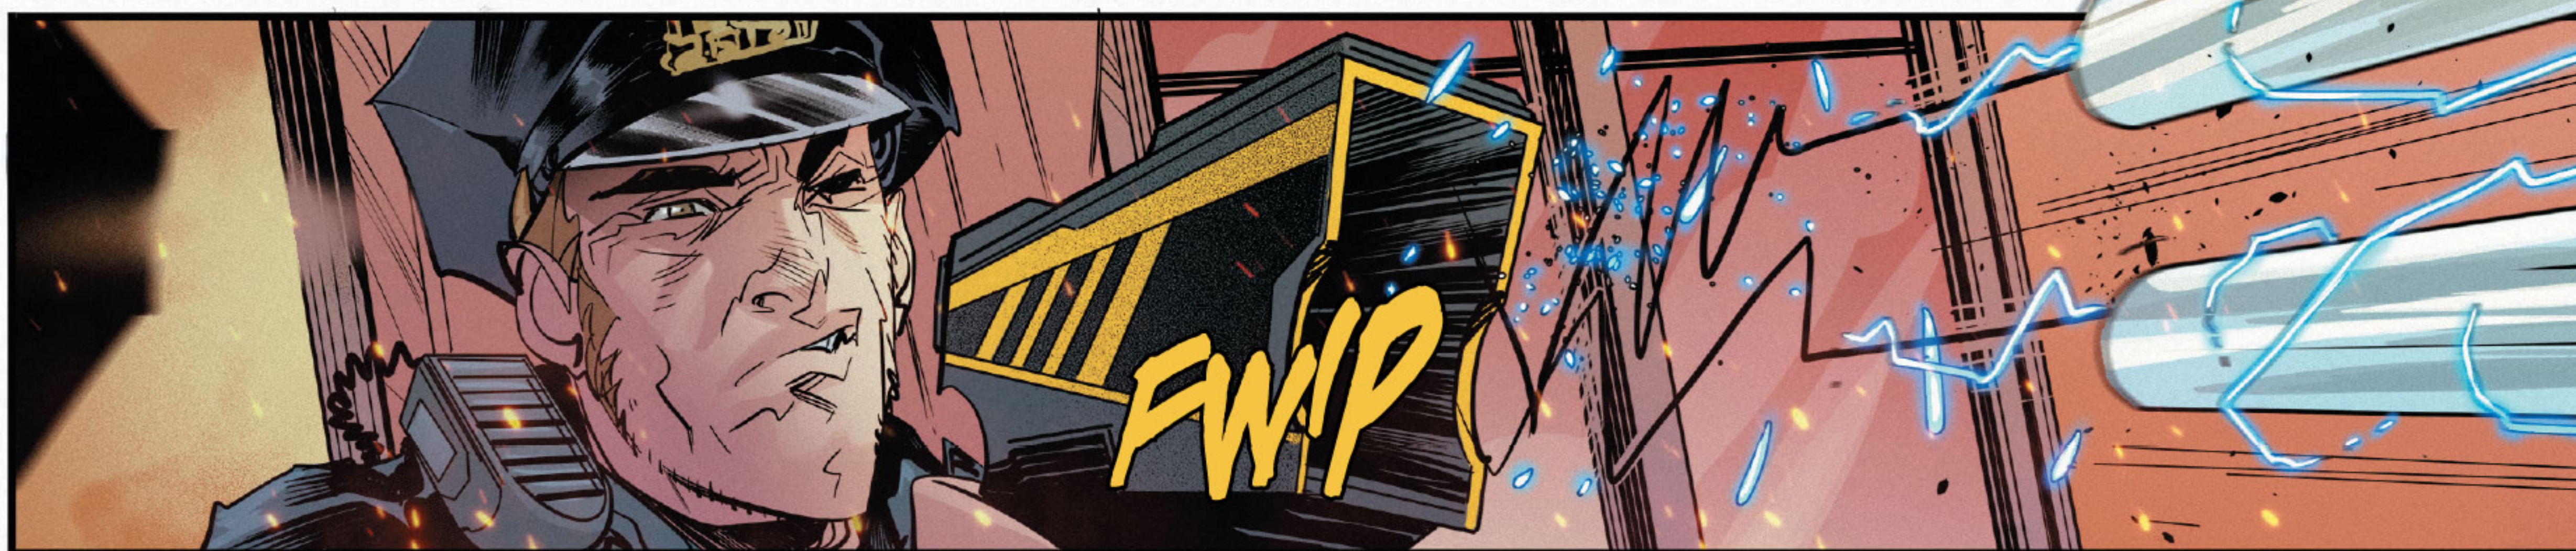

Aaaaaiieeee!

KRIK

I've lived and I've died and I've lived.

Over and over and over again.

The mutants always meet their end.

They wanted this time to be different, and they got their wish.

I've seen
the future.

I just didn't think it would get here so fast.
